Chapter 1: Kids' Slips as Evidence for Language Development

1.1. Slips of the Tongue and Language Development	1
1.1.1. Prologue	1
1.1.2. Slips of the Tongue: a New Methodology for the Study of Language Development	1
1.1.3. Overview of SOT Research in Adults and Children	3
1.2. A Model of Speech Production Planning	6
1.3. The Current Study: Methodology	11
1.3.1. How Can We Tell a Child Has Made a Slip?	11
1.3.2. Subjects	15
1.3.3. Specific Methodological Issues Regarding Data Collection	16
1.4. Classification System	21
1.4.1. Linguistic Components Involved in Errors	22
1.4.2. Directionality of Errors	25
1.4.3. Form of Errors	31
1.4.4. Making Decisions in Ambiguous Cases	34
1.4.5. Relationship Between Error Types and Processing Model	40
1.5. General Issues Regarding Children's SOTs	46
1.5.1. At What Age Do Children Begin Making Slips?	46
1.5.2. Individual Differences	47
1.5.3. Qualitative vs. Quantitative Analysis	48
1.6. Summary	48

Chapter 2: Kids' Slips and Adults' Slips: General Comparison

2.1. Overview	51
2.2. General Comparison to Adults	51
2.2.1. Children Produce Nearly All the Same Types of Errors as Adults	51
2.2.2. Children Make the Same General Proportion of Error Types as Adults	56
2.2.3. Children Make the Same General Proportion of Error Types as Each Other	57
2.3. Developmental Trends	61
2.3.1. Developmental Trends in Within-Word vs. Between-Word Phonological Errors	61

2.3.2. Developmental Trends in Directionality	68
2.3.3. Developmental Trends in Error Type	74
2.3.4. Developmental Trends in the Linguistic Units Involved in Errors	79
2.4. Corrections	80
2.4.1. Correction Types	80
2.4.2. The Use of Editing Expressions	84
2.4.3. Individual Differences in Self-Correction	88
2.5. Summary	90

Chapter 3: Phonetics and Phonology

3.1. Introduction	91
3.1.1. From Babbling to Phonology	91
3.1.2. Overview of Development of Phonological Units	91
3.2. Phonetic Features	93
3.2.1. Errors of Phonetic Features	94
3.2.2. Featural Similarity of Consonants Involved in Errors	97
3.2.3. Vowel Features	103
3.2.4. Summary of Features	108
3.3. Segments and Phonemes	109
3.3.1. Allowable Segments	109
3.3.2. Consonants vs. Vowels in Segmental Errors	110
3.3.3. Syllabic and Non-Syllabic Liquids	112
3.3.4. Phonemes and Allophones	115
3.3.5. Early Phonetically-Based Representations for Segments	122
3.3.6. Summary of Segments and Phonemes	124
3.4. Syllables	124
3.4.1. What Is a Syllable?	124
3.4.2. Syllables in Phonological Errors	127
3.4.3. Syllables in Lexical Substitution Errors	133
3.4.4. Syllables in Word Blends	137
3.4.5. Summary of Evidence Regarding Syllables	141
3.5. Internal Syllable Structure in Phonological Errors	142
3.5.1. Overview	142
3.5.2. Consonant Clusters	142
3.5.3. Phonological Errors: Evidence for Internal Syllable Structure	147
3.5.4. Comparison to Laubstein (1987): Word vs. Morpheme; Body vs. Rhyme	158
3.5.5. Internal Syllable Structure in Telescoping Errors	164
3.5.6. Summary of Internal Syllable Structure in Phonological Errors	169
3.6. Internal Syllable Structure in Paradigmatic Lexical Errors	170
3.6.1. Overview	170
3.6.2. Internal Syllable Structure in Lexical Substitution Errors	171
3.6.3. Internal Syllable Structure in Lexical Blend Errors	173

3.6.4. Summary of Internal Syllable Structure in Lexical Errors, and Summary of Findings Regarding Syllables	179
3.7. Stress and Intonation	184
3.7.1. Lexical Stress	184
3.7.2. Phrasal Rhythm	196
3.7.3. Tonic Stress as an Organizer of the Syntagmatic Phonological String	199
3.7.4. Errors of Intonation	203
3.7.5. Summary of Stress and Intonation	207
3.8. The Phonological Structure of Lexical Entries	208
3.9. Summary and Conclusions: The Acquisition of Phonology as a 'Frames, then Content' Progression	213

Chapter 4: The Lexicon and Lexical Errors

4.1. Introduction	221
4.1.1. Overview of the Chapter	221
4.1.2. 'Lexical Errors' and 'Lexical Entries'	222
4.1.3. Quantitative Analysis and Comparison to Adults	227
4.2. Factors Involved in Causing Lexical Errors	234
4.2.1. Lexical Category	234
4.2.2. Semantic and Phonological Similarity	237
4.2.3. Tonic Word Position	257
4.2.4. Utterance Influence	266
4.2.5. Weight in the Phonological Phrase	271
4.2.6. Environmental Influence	273
4.2.7. Collocational Phrases	276
4.2.8. Discourse Context	278
4.2.9. 'On The Mind': Freudian Slips?	279
4.2.10. Summary of Influences on Lexical Errors	281
4.3. Lexical Categories	290
4.3.1. Gathering Evidence on the Representation of Lexical Category	290
4.3.2. Lexical Category Consistency	291
4.3.3. Specific Lexical Categories	294
4.3.4. Lexical Category vs. Error Class	300
4.3.5. Lexical Categories at the 1-Word and 2-Word Stages?	301
4.4. Summary and Conclusions	307

Chapter 5: Semantic Relationships in Lexical Errors

5.1. Introduction	311
5.2. Semantic Relations	315
5.2.1. Frame Semantics as a Basis for the Taxonomy	315
5.2.2. Classification of Semantic Relations	320
5.2.3. Procedure for Classification	330
5.3. Results	332

5.3.1. Semantic Relationships by Data Set	332
5.3.2. Semantic Relationships by Age	334
5.3.3. Semantic Relationships by Error Type	340
5.3.4. Semantic Relationships in Lexical Classes	348
5.4. Comparison to Other Studies	355
5.5. Semantic vs. Phonological Relationships in Processing	367
5.6. The Onset of Lexical Semantic Relationships	374
5.7. Summary and Conclusions	381

Chapter 6: Morphology and Syntax

6.1. Introduction	385
6.2. The Morphological Structure of Lexical Entries	385
6.3. Errors Involving Morphology	389
6.3.1. Morpheme-Unit Errors	390
6.3.1.1. Types of Errors, and Lexical Categories Involved	390
6.3.1.2. Morphological, Phonological, or Lexical?	393
6.3.1.3. Morphology and Speech Production Planning	401
6.3.1.4. Developmental Patterns in Morpheme-Unit Errors	404
6.3.2. Strandings	407
6.3.2.1. Types of Errors and Lexical Categories	407
6.3.2.2. Exceptions to Strandings?	410
6.3.2.3. Strandings in Planning	413
6.3.2.4. Developmental Patterns in Strandings	416
6.3.3. Order of Acquisition of Morphemes	417
6.3.4. Accommodation	419
6.3.4.1. Allomorphy and Regularity of Inflectional Morphemes	419
6.3.4.2. Agreement in Verbs and Pronouns	422
6.3.4.3. Articles and Other Determiners	424
6.3.5. Conclusions	428
6.4. Morphological Structure in Lexical Substitution and Blend Errors	428
6.4.1. Methodology	429
6.4.2. Morphological Relatedness of Words Involved in Lexical Errors	430
6.4.2.1. General Comparison	430
6.4.2.2. Behavior of Different Types of Morphemes	434
6.4.2.3. Morphological Structure in Malapropisms	442
6.4.2.4. Regular vs. Irregular Morphology; Mass vs. Count; Transitivity	444
6.5. Morphology: Summary and Discussion	457
6.6. Syntax	460
6.6.1. Introduction	460
6.6.2. Syntax in the 2-Word Stage?	461
6.6.3. Phrase Blends	465
6.6.3.1. Introduction	465

6.6.3.2. The Causes of Phrase Blends	467
6.6.3.3. Structure of Phrase Blends	474
6.6.4. Summary of Syntax	480
6.7. Conclusions and Epilogue	482
