

LIBRARIES,
LEADERSHIP,
AND SCHOLARLY COMMUNICATION

Essays by
RICK ANDERSON

An imprint of the American Library Association

CHICAGO | 2016

CONTENTS

Preface xi

SECTION I LIBRARIES AND THEIR COLLECTIONS, NOW AND IN THE FUTURE I

- 1 Being Essential Is Not Enough 3
- 2 My Name Is Ozymandias, King of Kings 9
- 3 The Crisis in Research Librarianship 14
- 4 The Portal Problem: The Twin Plights of the Encyclopaedia Britannica and the Library Collection 20
- 5 On Necessity, Virtue, and Digging Holes with Hammers 26
- 6 Can, Should, and Will 30
- 7 How Sacred Are Our Patrons' Privacy Rights? Answer Carefully 36
- 8 Crazy Idea #274: Just Stop Collecting 40
- 9 Local and Global, Now and Forever: A Matrix Model of "Depth Perception" in Library Work 44
- 10 A Quiet Culture War in Research Libraries—and What It Means for Librarians, Researchers, and Publishers 50
- 11 Interrogating the American Library Association's "Core Values" Statement 60
- 12 Asserting Rights We Don't Have: Libraries and "Permission to Publish" 64
- 13 Frenemies: The Perfect and the Good, the Noisy and the Important 68

- 14 What Patron-Driven Acquisition Does and Doesn't Mean: An FAQ 73
- 15 Reference Services, Scalability, and the Starfish Problem 78
- 16 Kitten in a Beer Mug: The Myth of the Free Gift 82
- 17 You Might Be a Zealot If . . . 86
- 18 It's Not about the Workflow: Patron-Centered Practices for Twenty-First-Century Serialists 90
- 19 Can't Buy Us Love: The Declining Importance of Library Books and the Rising Importance of Special Collections 100
- 20 On Knowing the Value of Everything and the Price of Nothing 113
- 21 Preservation, Yes—but What Shall We Preserve? 117
- 22 The Struggle for Library Space 122

SECTION II SCHOLARLY COMMUNICATION AND LIBRARY-PUBLISHER RELATIONS 129

- 23 On Advocacy, Analysis, and the Vital Importance of Knowing the Difference 131
- 24 Signal Distortion: Why the Scholarly Communication Economy Is So Weird 135
- 25 Six Mistakes Your Sales Reps Are Making—and Six That Librarians Are Making 140
- 26 Prices, Models, and Fairness: A (Partly) Imaginary Phone Conversation 148
- 27 Print-on-Demand and the Law of Unintended Consequences 152
- 28 Quality and Relevance: A Matrix Model for Thinking about Scholarly Books and Libraries 155
- 29 No Such Thing as a Bad Book? Rethinking “Quality” in the Research Library 160
- 30 No, You May Not Come Train My Staff 167

-
- 31 On the Likelihood of Academia “Taking Back” Scholarly Publishing 171
- 32 Is a Rational Discussion of Open Access Possible? 175
- 33 CC BY, Copyright, and Stolen Advocacy 191
- 34 Open-Access Rhetoric, Economics, and the Definition of “Research” 195
- 35 CC BY and Its Discontents: A Growing Challenge for Open Access 200
- 36 Deceptive Publishing: Why We Need a Blacklist, and Some Suggestions on How to Do It Right 205
- 37 The NPR Model and the Financing of Scholarly Communication 211
- Index* 215