

Contents

Contributors.....	xiv
1. Learning through Practice.....	1
1.1 Learning through Practice.....	1
1.2 Emerging and Growing Interest in Learning through Practice .....	3
1.3 Approaches to and Models of Learning through Practice.....	8
1.4 Section One: Conceptual Premises of Learning through Practice .....	8
1.5 Section Two: Instances of Practice .....	13
2. Learning in Praxis, Learning for Praxis.....	21
2.1 Introduction.....	21
2.2 Praxis and Theory .....	23
2.2.1 A Historical Perspective.....	24
2.2.2 A Phenomenological Perspective .....	25
2.3 Learning at/for Work: A Case from Fish Culture .....	28
2.4 Coda.....	34
3. Knowledge, Working Practices, and Learning .....	37
3.1 My Perspective on Knowledge .....	37
3.2 Learning Trajectories .....	41
3.3 The Construction of Professional Practices in the Workplace .....	43
3.4 How do People Learn at Work?.....	46
3.5 Transfer of Knowledge Between Contexts .....	49
3.6 Factors Affecting Learning at Work .....	51
3.7 The Role of the Manager in Supporting Learning .....	56
4. The Practices of Learning through Occupations .....	59
4.1 Learning for and through Practice .....	59
4.2 Historical Conceptions of Learning through Practice and their Worth.....	61
4.3 Participatory Practice: A Conception of Learning through Practice .....	68
4.4 Individuals' Engagement, Agency, and Subjectivity .....	71
4.5 Intersubjectivity, Appropriation, and Extending Knowledge .....	76
4.6 Participation and Learning .....	78

5. Objectual Practice and Learning in Professional Work .....	82
5.1 Professional Work and Learning .....	82
5.2 New Contexts for Professional Work .....	85
5.3 Object-related Learning .....	87
5.4 The Study.....	88
5.5 Dynamics of Objectual Practice in Computer Engineering .....	90
5.5.1 Interplay between Explorative and Confirmative Practice.....	91
5.5.2 Linking Practitioners with Wider Knowledge Communities .....	95
5.5.3 Mediating Participation along Multiple Timescales.....	97
5.5.4 Facilitating Reflexive Learning.....	99
5.6 Concluding Remarks .....	100
6. Learning through and about Practice: A Lifeworld Perspective .....	104
6.1 A Need to Reexamine Learning through Practice .....	104
6.2 Historical Development of Lifeworld Perspective.....	106
6.3 Ways of Being in Workplace Contexts.....	108
6.4 Learning Ways of Being in Higher Education Contexts.....	111
6.5 Learning from a Lifeworld Perspective: Developing Ways of Being.....	116
7. Conceptualising Professional Identification as Flexibility, Stability and Ambivalence .....	120
7.1 Learning and Professional Identification as Life Politics .....	120
7.1.1 Flexibility – Stability – Ambivalence .....	122
7.2 Empirical Data.....	123
7.3 Becoming an Engineer or a Physician .....	124
7.3.1 Becoming an Engineer .....	124
7.3.2 Becoming a Physician .....	126
7.4 Being an Engineer or a Physician .....	128
7.4.1 Identification as a Flexible Strategy or a Permanent State .....	128
7.4.2 Engineer – Confined to Workplace, Occupation, and Working Hours ..	130
7.4.3 Physician – Profession Associated with Personality .....	131
7.5 Flexibility, Stability, and Ambivalence in Practice .....	132
7.6 Work, Life Politics, and Sustainable Life.....	133
7.6.1 Lifelong Qualification as Exclusion.....	134
7.6.2 Learning and Professional Identification as Life Politics.....	135
7.7 Concluding Remarks .....	136
8. Developing Vocational Practice and Social Capital in Jewellery .....	139
8.1 Introduction .....	139
8.2 Workplace and Practice-based Learning .....	141
8.3 The Development of Work Placement Scheme in the Jewellery Industry.....	142

8.4 The Development of Vocational Practice in the Jewellery Industry .....	146
8.5 Practice-based Learning: Epistemic and Pedagogic Issues .....	149
8.6 Conclusion .....	152
9. Guidance as an Interactional Accomplishment Practice-based Learning within the Swiss VET System .....	156
9.1 Introduction .....	156
9.2 Apprenticeship in the Swiss VET System .....	157
9.3 Researching Vocational Learning and Language-in-Interaction .....	160
9.4 An Interactional Approach to Guidance in the Workplace .....	163
9.4.1 Spontaneous Guidance .....	166
9.4.2 Requested Guidance .....	168
9.4.3 Distributed Guidance .....	171
9.4.4 Denied Guidance .....	173
9.5 Concluding Remarks and Practical Implications .....	175
10. Cooperative Education: Integrating Classroom and Workplace Learning .....	180
10.1 Cooperative Education as a Model of Practice-based Learning .....	180
10.2 The Development of Cooperative Education .....	181
10.3 The Organisational Milieu of Cooperative Education .....	182
10.4 Theorising Learning in Cooperative Education .....	185
10.5 Integrating Classroom and Workplace Learning .....	188
10.6 The Real Value of Cooperative Education .....	191
11. Individual Learning Paths of Employees in the Context of Social Networks .....	197
11.1 Introduction .....	197
11.2 Viewing the Organisation as a Network of Actors .....	200
11.3 Learning-Relevant Experiences Gained from the Work Network .....	203
11.3.1 How Actors Organise Work: A Cycle .....	203
11.3.2 Four Ideal Types of Work Process .....	205
11.3.3 Three Dimensions in Work-Network Structures .....	207
11.4 Learning-Relevant Experiences Gained in the Learning Network .....	208
11.4.1 Actors Organise Learning Networks: A Cycle .....	209
11.4.2 Actors Create Learning Programmes .....	209
11.4.3 Four Ideal Types of Learning Network .....	211
11.4.4 The Importance of Actors' Action Theories .....	216
11.5 How do Employees create their Individual Learning Paths? .....	216
11.6 Learning, Networks, Structure, and Agency .....	218
12. Apprenticeships: What happens in On-the-Job Training (OJT)? .....	222
12.1 Apprenticeship and Learning .....	222
12.1.1 Institutional History of Apprenticeship Programmes in the US .....	224
12.2 Methodology of this Study .....	226

12.3 The Physical Context of the Classroom as compared to the Field.....	227
12.4 On the Job: The Worksite itself as Resource for Learning .....	228
12.5 On the Job: Tools and Equipment as Resources for Learning .....	229
12.6 Learning Through Interaction without Master-Apprentice Relationships .....	230
12.7 Learning and the 'Bottom Line' .....	231
12.8 What can go Wrong .....	233
12.9 Apprenticeship Learning as Reproduction of the Economic Viability ..	235
12.10 Conclusion .....	237
13. Interactive Research as a Strategy for Practice-based Learning .....	240
13.1 Introduction .....	240
13.2 Towards a Model of Competence Development.....	241
13.3 Cultural Context of Teachers' Learning and Professional Growth.....	243
13.4 Interactive Research.....	245
13.5 The Interactive Processes – The 'Quality Case' .....	246
13.5.1 Local Schools' Collective Competence Development .....	247
13.6 The Practice-based Model .....	250
13.6.1 Identifying Practice .....	250
13.6.2 Reflective Transformation.....	251
13.6.3 Joint Construction and Institutionalisation of Tools.....	252
13.6.4 Professional Growth and Remaking of Practice.....	253
14. The Relationship between Coach and Coachee.....	256
14.1 Coaching.....	256
14.1.1 The Coaching Relationship .....	258
14.2 Coachees' Accounts of the Coaching Relationship .....	259
14.3 Conclusion: Crucial Aspects of an Effective Coaching Relationship....	264
15. The Development of Airline Pilot Skills through Simulated Practice.....	268
15.1 Pilot Training .....	268
15.2 Early Flight and Pilot Training .....	269
15.3 Pilot Education in the Jet Age.....	271
15.4 Influences on Major Aviation Training .....	272
15.4.1 Crew Resource Management and Nontechnical Skills.....	275
15.4.2 Technology.....	279
15.4.3 Simulation .....	279
15.5 Pilot Training into the Future.....	283
15.6 Practice-based Learning in Aviation.....	284
Index .....	287