

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	7
Introduction	9
I. Pain as a Creative Force
1. "Happily melancholy": Pleasure and Pain in Early Beckett Mark Nixon	27
2. Mourning Becomes Electric: Mediating Loss in Eh Joe Graley Herren	43
3. Beckettian Pain, In the Flesh: Singularity, Community and "the Work" Garin Dowd	67
4. The Body in Pain and Freedom of the Mind: Performing Beckett and Noh Mariko Hori Tanaka	93
II. Pain in the Age of Uncertainty
5 "Frankly now, is there pain?": Beckett, Medicine and the Composition of Pain Peter Fifield	117
6. "Strange Pain": Archive, Trauma and Testimony in Samuel Beckett and Christian Boltanski David Houston Jones	135
7. Everyday Life and the Pain of Existence in Happy Days Yoshiki Tajiri	151
III. Pain at the Limit of the Human
8. "We have our being in justice": Samuel Beckett's How It Is Jonathan Boulter	173

9. "That or Groan": Paining and De-paining in Beckett Mary Bryden	201
10. The Appearance of the Human at the Limit of Representation: Beckett and Pain in the Experience of Language Michiko Tsushima	217
Contributors	237
Index	241