

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: Genre Trouble and Extreme Cinema	1
	Body Genres and Extreme Cinema	7
	Film Theory After Maurice Merleau-Ponty	12
	Beyond the Shock of On-Screen Sex and Violence	23
	References	26
2	Carlos Reygadas, the Avant-Garde, and the Senses	29
	The Difficult Film	33
	"[A]ll the Levels of Perception"	37
	Narrative Shock	37
	Cinematography and Levels	47
	A Slow Dream, "As If" It Was Real	57
	References	62
3	!Que Viva México!: Reygadas as Documentarian	67
	Performative Documentary	68
	Human Animals, Non-Human Animals	80
	Fictional Death: "Come Play with Us Cos Dad Has Died Already"	86
	References	96

4	I Don't Know It When I See It: Catherine Breillat's Pornography	99
	Erotic and/or Pornographic	103
	Looking-At Breillat's Films	111
	References	120
5	Horrible Pornography: Fat Girl (À Ma Soeur!, 2001)	123
	Sexual Numbers	124
	Fat Girl: Synopsis and Sexual Numbers	126
	Pornography "Too Late!"	129
	Pornography Under-Age	136
	Problems with the Pornographic	139
	Horror "on Time!"	142
	Breillat's Horrible Fat Girl	152
	References	160
6	On-Screen and Off-Screen Flesh and Blood: Performance, Pornography, Spectatorship	165
	Blow Job (2005)	171
	Mesquida's Tears	180
	The Extradiegetic and Profilmic Event in Breillat's
	Brief Crossing	188
	The Ethics of Breillat's Method	190
	Affective and Possessive Spectatorship	193
	References	195
7	Reframing Spectatorship Theory with Extreme Cinema	199
	Pornography and Psychoanalytic Film Theory	199
	The Confrontation with the Real of the Film	204
	The Remembered Film	208
	Postscript	213
	References	214

8 Conclusion: Know Genre, No Trouble	217
A Courageous Supplement	223
References	228
Filmography	231
Bibliography	233
Index	237