

Contents

Preface . . . . .	1
Engaging Japanese philosophy: A short history	2
Conventions	8
Acknowledgements	12
1. Engagement . . . . .	15
A case of mistaken identity	16
Two kinds of knowing, two kinds of reading	18
Thematic motifs of engagement	26
Forms of analysis and argument	32
Jumping in	41
THE ANCIENT AND CLASSICAL PERIODS
2. Blueprints for Japan: Shōtoku's Constitution and Shōmu's Nara (604–794) . . . . .	45
The iconic place of Prince Shōtoku (574–622)	46
Shōtoku's three intellectual resources	49
Shōtoku's "Seventeen-Article Constitution"	65
Shōtoku's contribution to Japanese philosophy	71
Philosophical foundations from the Nara period (710–794)	73
Emperor Shōmu (701–756) and his Sun Buddha	96
The Dōkyō affair	98
3. KŪKAI (774–835): The Man Who Wanted to Understand Everything . . . . .	101
Kūkai's spiritual quest	102
The two kinds of knowing	108
The three intimacies	114
Bodymind: The proprioceptive cosmos	126
The ten mindsets	129
Kūkai's contribution to Japanese philosophy	136
4. Shining Prince, Shining Buddha: Heian to Kamakura (794–1333) . . . . .	138
The aesthetic of the Heian court	139

Popular Buddhism: Amidism	145
Tendai after Saichō	149
Shingon after Kūkai	155
New religious movements in the Kamakura period (1185–1333)	158

THE MEDIEVAL PERIOD

5. SHINRAN (1173–1262): Naming What Comes Naturally . . . . .	181
Inspired by Hōnen	182
Shinran's questions	184
Hōnen's praxis and Shinran's praxis compared	188
Shinran's metapragis	193
The nature of Amida: Shinran's metaphysics	201
Conclusion	210
6. DŌGEN (1200–1253): Nothing Doing; Everything Counts. . . . .	212
Engaging Dōgen's questions	215
From Zen student to Zen master	216
Dōgen the philosopher	218
The interpersonal	234
Conclusion	243
7. Refuge from the Storm: Muromachi to the Warring Domains (1333–1568). . . . .	246
Muromachi aesthetics	248
The golden and silver pavilions	250
Medieval religion	257
Late medieval Buddhism	265

THE EDO PERIOD

8. The Open Marketplace of Ideas: Unification and Edo Thought (1568–1801) . . . . .	277
Steps to unification: The three hegemon	277
A post-medieval society	279
Western learning and Christianity	288
Confucianism in the early Edo period	299
The warrior ethos of the Edo period	315
Shintō and Buddhism in the Edo period	325
Conclusion	344
9. OGYŪ Sorai (1666–1728): The Present Wisdom of the Past Perfect. . . . .	346
How to read a Chinese classical text	347
Sorai's philosophical questions	350

- Training the rulers* 358
Sorai's impact 369
10. MOTOORI Norinaga (1730–1801): In Touch with the Spirit of Words. . . . . 371
Norinaga: Scholar in training 373
Norinaga's poetics 375
Language philosophies: Sorai and Norinaga compared 378
Norinaga on the community of praxis 384
Norinaga's fixation on "Kojiki" 387
Engaging Norinaga's philosophy today 394
Norinaga's ethnocentrism 397
Norinaga's philosophical contribution 398

THE MODERN PERIOD

11. Black Ships, Black Rain: The End of Edo to the End of War (1801–1945) . . . . . 403
Three ideologies for imperial restoration 404
Building a new Japan 412
The birth of modern academic philosophy 414
The modern period as context for Japanese philosophy 439
12. NISHIDA Kitarō (1870–1945): Putting Nothing in Its Place. . . . . 442
Nishida's rise to fame 443
Three profiles of Nishida as philosopher 444
"Inquiry into the Good" (1911): The system of pure experience 454
Beyond "Inquiry" 458
The logic of experience 463
Multiple worlds 474
Conclusion 475
13. WATSUJI Tetsurō (1889–1960): Philosophy in the Midst . . . . . 478
Pilgrimages to ancient Japan and Europe 479
"Fūdo": The milieu of human existence 487
Watsuji's ethics as philosophical anthropology 492
From ethics to the state 510
Concluding evaluation 516
14. Aftershocks and Afterthoughts: Postwar to the New Century. . . 520
Wartime ideology and its philosophical effects 522
Japan's problem with modernity 531
Rethinking the religious 545
Philosophies of the self 557
Being Japanese in Japanese 563

15. Conclusion . . . . .	574
Philosophy as Way . . . . .	575
The field of Japanese philosophy: Some seminal themes . . . . .	582
The specter returns . . . . .	590
Supplementary Notes . . . . .	593

REFERENCE MATERIAL

Pointers for Studying Japan . . . . .	681
Pronouncing Japanese in the Hepburn romanization . . . . .	681
Understanding Japanese names . . . . .	683
About the Japanese language . . . . .	685
Map of Japan . . . . .	697
Bibliography . . . . .	698
Index . . . . .	719