

Contents

Introduction: Mapping a Blind Spot: The German-Jewish Holocaust Novel of the First Generation	1
1. An Absence in Context: Holocaust Representation in Testimony, Scholarship, and Literature	11
Speaking the Unspeakable: Holocaust Survivor Testimony	12
Speaking of Speaking the Unspeakable: The Study of Holocaust Representation	14
Imagining the Unspeakable: Holocaust Fiction	20
The Past as Trace: Postmodernism	30
The Past as Symptom: Trauma Theory	36
The Past as Legacy: 'post-memory'	45
'A real fictitious discourse': The Holocaust Novel in the First Generation	50
2. Writing of Broken Time(s): H. G. Adler, Eine Reise, Die unsichtbare Wand	57
A Twofold Testimonial Project	60
The Return of Apeiron	69
Dis(ad)vantaging the Reader	79
Terra Incognita	87
3. The Unhoused Past: Elisabeth Augustin, Auswege; Jenny Aloni, Der Wartesaal	90
The Uncanny Legacy	93
Losing the Plot: Elisabeth Augustin's Auswege	98
Textual Labyrinths: Jenny Aloni's Der Wartesaal	117
4. The Past Encrypted: Erich Fried, Ein Soldat und ein Mädchen	136
'To omit a word always ...'	137
'... to resort to obvious periphrases ...'	147
'That is the tortuous method preferred ...'	153
'... in each of the meanderings ...'	161
'... of his indefatigable novel ...'	166

5. Design from Debris:
Wolfgang Hildesheimer, Tynset, Masante	182
‘Jenes große erinnerungspoetologische Projekt?’	188
‘Der Schrecken [ist] eigentlich das Hauptthema’	191
‘Speculations on ways to tell that story’	195
6. Conclusion: What Comes ‘After’:
The ‘Postmemory’ Holocaust Novel	205
 Bibliography	223
Index	241