

Contents

List of figures	vii
Preamble	viii
Notes on translation and bibliographical references	xiv
PART I
From public order to security	1
1 Studies on military forces and public order in Rome and Italy from Republic to Principate: points of view	3
2 Between Pax , Disciplina and Securitas : moving the focus	23
3 The security of Rome and the security of the emperor: the slow development of a discourse and its transformation into a communicative instrument	31
PART II
The birth of a dispositive	71
Introduction: Augustan criminal legislation and military reforms	73
4 The security of the Princeps in Rome: military escorts and bodyguards	89
5 The security of the urban area and its inhabitants: civilian, paramilitary and military personnel	105
PART III
Testing a dispositive	119
Introduction: the security of the Princeps and of urban spaces in Rome from Tiberius to the Severans	121

6	A topography of security and dangerous places: with an episode	141
7	The urban soldiers and the city	165
PART IV
	Policing and security in imperial Italy	187
	Introduction: security in Italy and the role of the central government between Augustus and the Severans	189
8	Praesidia Urbis et Italiae : Grumentum and its territory – a case study	201
9	Praetoria and praetorians: the emperor's travels and security ( Latium Vetus )	208
10	Emperors on the move: security in the Campanian cities and in the Albanum Domitiani (first century AD)	230
	Epilogue: Securitati Caesaris totiusque Urbis	245
	Bibliography	259
	Index	292