

Contents

Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	1
1. Debating the Cultural Revolution	13
Introduction: who is writing history and who are the Chinese?	13
The haojie discourse and the Cultural Revolution	15
Violence, brutality and causes	17
Constructive policies	19
Destruction of Chinese culture and tradition	20
Cultural Revolution and cultural creativity	28
What is the Enlightenment?	30
2. Constructing history: memories, values and identity	31
Introduction: speech act of identification	31
From the wounded to the mentalité: the re-rehearsal of May Fourth	32
Be American citizens in thinking	37
Sinological orientalism	38
Two whateverism	38
The politics of joining the civilized world	40
Media agenda and identification with the West	41
Memoirs, values and identification	42
The intellectual-business-political complex in contemporary China	45
Conclusion: memories, identity, knowledge and truth	45
3. Constructing history: memoirs, autobiographies and biographies in Chinese	48
Introduction: scope and rationale	48
Memoirs, autobiographies and biographies in Chinese: a literature survey	49
The truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth	53
Some common themes on Mao and the Cultural Revolution	54
Memories as history	61
Conclusion: discourse, narratives and memories	63

4. Mao, The Unknown Story: an intellectual scandal	65
Introduction hyper-promotion of a book	65
Scholarship, what scholarship?	66
Misleading claims and absurd explanations	71
Further evidence of 'scholarship'	73
Further evidence of flaws and misleading claims	74
Logical inconsistency within the text	75
Mao, China's Hitler and Stalin	77
Fairy tale and how scholarship changes	78
Does it matter?	79
It does not matter so long as the politics is right	80
 5. Mao: the known story and the logic of denial	 81
Introduction: Mao the known story, a general outline	81
Evidence of the known story	82
So what was the problem?	84
The famine death toll	85
The economy in the Mao era	87
The yardstick of Hitler: a favourite European comparison	88
Mao's personality: the known story	89
The logic of denial of the known story	90
Academic reception	91
Revolution: from farewell to burial	92
Furet and the French Revolution	93
Is revolution inevitable?	94
An alternative model of development	95
 6. How a medical doctor doctors history: a case study of Li Zhisui	 97
Introduction; expatriate Chinese memories - a literary phenomenon	97
Memories and the politics of knowledge production	98
The book	99
Knowledge gap	100
Knowledge production and the market	101
The logic of the differences in two versions	101
Who is to be fooled and why?	102
Protests from the insiders	103
Was Li Mao's personal physician?	103
How much did the doctor know?	104
What did the medical doctor know about politics?	105
The politics of sex	106

History as doctored by the doctor and his US mentors: a critical analysis	107
Conclusion: history what history?	115
7. Challenging the hegemony: contrary narratives in the e-media (I) – Mao and the Cultural Revolution	117
Introduction: emerging contrary narratives	117
Media effect, public space and e-media	118
Ma Yinchu, population control and elite attitudes	120
The credibility of Li Rui	121
Challenging the late-Mao thesis	123
Challenging Jung Chang and Jon Halliday	125
Liu Shaoqi, Deng Xiaoping and the Great Leap Forward	126
Debates on issues related to the Cultural Revolution	128
Disagreement between Mao and Liu Shaoqi: the two-line struggle thesis	128
Other unofficial views of the Cultural Revolution	132
Sea change of attitudes	133
Wang Xizhe the dissident	134
Kong Qingdong and the cowshed	134
Memoirs of different narratives	135
Challenging Wang Youqin	135
Conclusion: the question of truth	136
8. Challenging the hegemony: contrary narratives in the e-media (II) – the Mao era	137
Introduction: history in socioeconomic context	137
The state of the economy in the Mao era and during the Cultural Revolution	137
Manufacturing truth	147
Signs of a re-evaluation of Jiang Qing	148
The issues of health care and education	151
A re-evaluation of Kang Sheng?	154
The Chinese themselves say so	155
Manufacturing truth and e-media counter-action	155
The legacy of Mao and the e-media	156
Conclusion: voices from the bottom for a battle that has just begun	157
9. The problem of the rural–urban divide in pursuit of modernity: values and attitudes	159
Introduction: the year 2003	159
The rise of China, but the risk of collapse	159
The urban–rural divide	160

Three stories of rural pain	161
Rural Chinese: beasts of burden on whom modernity is built	163
The rural-urban divide: values and attitudes	165
Post-Mao reforms: myths versus reality	167
Conclusion: the state and the countryside	171
10. The battle of China's history: seeing the past from the present	173
Introduction: a little incident	173
Three questions about the post-Mao reforms	174
Is China a capitalist country? And does it matter?	177
Capitalism with Chinese characteristics?	185
White cat, black cat: the argument of efficiency versus fairness	189
Seeing the past from the present: a hole in the discursive hegemony	190
Conclusion: truth and belief values of socialism and China's future direction	191
Truth and belief values of a political discourse	191
Truth and belief value of exploiting the peasantry	192
Do the values of socialism matter?	192
Learning from past failures	193
The socialist truth and belief value of land ownership	194
The socialist truth and belief value of labour law	196
The socialist truth and belief values of healthcare and education	197
The battle of China's history	198
China's future direction	200
Notes	202
Glossary of Chinese terms and names	211
Bibliography	222
Index	266