

Contents

Foreword	vii
Preface	xi
Acknowledgments	xv
Introduction: The Canon and the Africana Worldview	xvii
1 Literary Africology	1
2 Twentieth Century Black Lives Mattered: Reading Male Mortality in The Souls of Black Folk and The Living Is Easy	11
3 “Can’t the Race Stand a Joke?”: Humor and Pan-African Folk Negotiation in Banjo	31
4 Africana Literary Methods and the Bibliographic Shift in Iola Leroy and The Street	43
5 Autobiography and Documentary Forms of Here I Stand as Black Cultural Mythology	59
6 A Raisin In The Sun and the Tradition of Literary Pan-Africanism	75
7 Ma Rainey’s Black Bottom and the Demographic Literary Standard	89
8 Parable of the Sower’s Earthseed as Black Liberation Theology	101
9 Self-Eulogy as Prophetic Afrofuturism in Narratives of John Henrik Clarke and Malcolm X	115

10	Maat and the Psychology of Justice in the Morrisonesque Community of Perfect Peace	129
11	Beyoncé? No. Lauryn Hill? Yes: Interludes of Womanist Hip-Hop and the Traditional Activist Genre	145
12	Broadway as Text : Africana History on Stage in Hamilton and Aida	163
13	Image and Verse, Music and Media: Diasporic Performance of Cultural Memory	177
	Conclusion: An Atmosphere of Freedom	191
	Bibliography	195
	Index	207
	About the Author	217