

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction: The Aesthetic Ground of Critical Theory	xi
Nathan Ross
The Relationship	xiii
The Chapters	xvii
Notes	xxiii
1 Benjamin and Adorno on Art as Critical Practice	1
Georg W. Bertram
Adorno's Critique of Benjamin	2
Benjamin's Conception of Art	5
Art as Critical Practice	9
Art as Critique that Effects Change	12
Notes	14
2 The Benjaminian Moment in Adorno's Aesthetic Theory: Spaciality and the Topos of the Bourgeois Intérieur	17
Marcia Morgan
Notes	29
3 Adorno's Critical Theory at the Crossroads of Hegel and Benjamin	31
Natalia Baeza
Adorno's Hegelianism: System and Totality	32
Adorno and Benjamin: Non-identity and the Non-conceptual	36
Conclusion: Adorno at the Crossroads of Hegel's Dialectic and Benjamin's Constellations	41
Notes	43

4	The Jargon of Ontology and the Critique of Language: Benjamin, Adorno, and Philosophy's Motherless Tongue Eduardo Mendieta	47
	The Purgatory of Language or the Theology of Language	49
	The Liquidation of Philosophy, or Philosophy's Non- Contemporaneous Contemporaneity	53
	Facia Hippocratica, or the Suffering of Nature	56
	Language as Ruination, or los Filósofos Deslenguados	59
	Notes	63
5	"The Polarity Informing Mimesis": The Social Import of Mimesis in Benjamin and Adorno Nathan Ross	67
	"The Polarity Informing Mimesis" in Benjamin's "Artwork" Essay	68
	Art's Mimesis of Social Rationality in Adorno's Aesthetic Theory	74
	Notes	79
6	Walter Benjamin's Critique of the Category of Aesthetic Form: "The Work of Art in the Age of its Technological Reproducibility" from the Perspective of Benjamin's Early Writing Alison Ross	83
	The Concept of Aesthetic Form in Early and Late Benjamin	86
	Distraction and Collective Experience	90
	Conclusion	94
	Notes	96
7	Walter Benjamin and the "Highly Productive Use of the Human Being's Self-Alienation" Stéphane Symons	99
	The Origin of German Tragic Drama (Mournfulness)	100
	The Work of Art in the Age of Its Technological Reproducibility (Possibility)	102
	Conclusion	108
	Notes	108
8	The Composer as Producer Joseph Weiss	111
	Locating the Truth of Technically Reproduced Music	114
	Coda: The Public Studio	121
	Notes	124
9	The Aesthetic Experience of Shudder: Adorno and the Kantian Sublime Surti Singh	129
	The Kantian Sublime and the Experience of Modern Art	130
	Archaic Fear and Subjectivity	136

The Shudder and the Subject to Come	139
Notes	141
10 Ecological Experience: Aesthetics, Life, and the Shudder in Adorno's Critical Theory	145
Rick Elmore
The Ecological Dimension of Adorno's Critique of Nature	146
Life, the Shudder, and Aesthetic Comportment	149
Notes	156
11 Enigmaticalness as a Fundamental Category in Adorno's Aesthetic Theory	159
Andrea Sakoparnig
How It is That Artworks Appear to be Enigmatic—The Logic of Aesthetic Experience	160
The Relevance of Aesthetic Enigmaticalness	169
The Importance of Enigmaticalness in Adorno's Thinking in General	171
Notes	173
12 Aesthetic Education, Human Capacity, Freedom	177
Tom Huhn
Notes	188
Bibliography	191
Index	199
Contributors	205