

Contents

List of Figures.....	ii
Preface	v
Abbreviations.....	vii
Introduction.....	1
Chapter 1: What's in a name? A brief historiography of Indo-Roman trade	4
Chapter 2: Ancient history 'from below'. Theoretical perspectives.....	7
Chapter 3: Turning the tables on Indo-Roman trade	13
The collegium of ivory- and citrus wood traders.....	15
Beyond the mirror: the cultural biography of an ivory statuette	22
Fitting Indian ivory with Roman furniture	36
The shreni of ivory carvers.....	43
Following the flows of people and products, fashion and furniture	46
Chapter 4: The invisible hand of Roman organisations	48
The collegium of goldsmiths and clusters of craftsmen in the jewellery trade	50
The collegium of frankincense and perfume traders	55
The collegium of spice traders and the Pepper Warehouses	57
The organisation of silk-weavers and traders	62
Organising the world of consumption	66
Chapter 5: Demand and supply in Rome and the provinces	68
Luxurious spices at everyday prices?.....	68
Pepper trade in the provinces.....	72
Perfume trade in the provinces	75
The long reach of interlocking markets	78
Chapter 6: The modus operandi of Roman long-distance trade	83
All routes lead to Rome—and India!	83
Networks at work: from Campania to the Red Sea coast and beyond.....	91
Eastern commerce, Western contracts: from Alexandria to Muziris.....	97
Taxes, the Alexandrian elite, and how it takes a fox to catch a fox.....	109
The not-so-invisible hand of Egyptian organisations	113
Big fish and small fry: well off merchants and small-time traders	115
Chapter 7: Towards a wider world of trade in the ancient Indian Ocean	117
Egyptian ports of the desert, gateways of the sea.....	117
Arabs, Axumites, and Indians in the desert	124
The long arm of organised commerce: Petra and Palmyra	127
Allegory of the cave. An inside out view of maritime trade.....	134
Taxes, trade, and contracting corporations of merchants	142
Merchants making money at the margins	145
Chapter 8: The invisible hand of Indian organisations	148
Ivory carvers, weavers, and sea-going merchants in Western India.....	151
Producing pearls, precious stones, and pepper in South India	164
Organising the world of production.....	171
Conclusion: Worlds apart trading together.....	173
Maps	177
Bibliography	187