CONTENTS

Acknowledgements vii

1 POSTMODERNISM AND FEMINISM: WHERE HAVE ALL THE WOMEN GONE? 1
Postmodernism and feminism 1
Subjectivity, femininity, and the postmodern person 6
Impersonality, modernist aesthetics, and women writers 16
Feminism and realism: the 'liberal self' 22

2 PSYCHOANALYSIS, GENDER, AND FICTION: ALTERNATIVE 'SELVES' 34
The limits of consciousness 34
Freud on sexuality: humanist psychology and feminist debates 49
Language and desire: from Freud to Lacan 53
Women, mothering, and identity: the pre-oedipal and literary implications 62
Theorizing modern fiction: the challenge from feminist psychoanalysis 78

3 FROM MODERNIST TEXTUALITY TO FEMINIST SEXUALITY; OR WHY I'M NO LONGER A-FREUD OF VIRGINIA WOOLF 88
Woolf, traditional readings: 'classic' modernist and liberal feminist 88
Woolf and the pre-oedipal: a rereading of To the Lighthouse 108
'Something central which permeated': reconstructing Clarissa Dalloway 115
Vision and 're-vision': the later novels 121

4 POST-WAR WOMEN WRITERS: CHALLENGING THE 'LIBERAL TRADITION' 126
Margaret Drabble 127
Anita Brookner 139
Sylvia Plath 151
Ann Tyler 157
Grace Paley 160

5 CONTEMPORARY WOMEN WRITERS: CHALLENGING POSTMODERNIST AESTHETICS 168
Fantasy, utopia, and subversion 168
The limits of my body are the limits of my world: fantasy and femininity 171
Margaret Atwood 179
Fay Weldon: contemporary feminist gothic 189
Feminism and utopianism: the limits of desire 196
Postmodern persons? 209

Notes 219

Bibliography 221

Index 241