
CONTENTS

Preface	v
Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction	i
Basic issues and questions	5
PART 1: THE RATIONALE FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF SMALL-SCALE CONSTRUCTION ENTERPRISES	11
1. Construction and development	13
An overview	13
Unique importance of construction	14
Patterns of demand	16
The industry's response to demand	19
2. Small-scale contractors: Origins and ambitions	23
Problems of categorisation	23
Origins of small-scale contractors	24
Growth and development targets among small-scale contractors	27
Political imperatives	34
3. Small-scale contractors: Difficulties and constraints	35
The general reputation of contractors	35
Typical difficulties faced by small-scale contractors	36
Problems deriving from the business environment	37
Problems deriving from clients	42
Problems deriving from contractors themselves	45
PART 2: BREAKING THE CONSTRAINTS	51
4. Policies and programmes for the development of small-scale construction enterprises	53
Intervention: Rewards and risks	53
Types of measure	54
Policies to improve access to work	55
Planning and formulating public sector demand	55

Price preferences	57
Prequalification procedures	60
Policies to encourage subcontracting	63
Selective and negotiated tenders	65
Disbandment of direct labour forces	66
Improvements in tendering procedures	67
Standardisation of design	68
Simplification of tender documents	69
Access to private sector work	69
Policies and programmes to improve the business environment	70
Relaxation of performance bonds	71
Loan guarantee schemes	72
Mobilisation allowances	74
Introduction of banking codes of practice	77
Improving contractors' access to materials	79
Improving access to tools and equipment	80
Improving payment procedures	81
Reducing retention money	83
Policies and programmes for training and advisory services	84
Factors to consider in providing training	84
A composite programme	86
Training needs assessment	87
Training institutions	88
Training methodologies	89
Publications	90
Advisory services	90
Formal teaching programmes	91
Progress takes time	92
International co-operation	92
5. Forming a contractor development agency	95
General principles	95
Key issues	96
Responsibility for CDA planning	96
Identification of target group	97
Characterisation of principal difficulties	99
Mobilising international assistance	99
CDA services	100
Flow of work	100
Training and advisory services	101
Finance	105
Corporate approach	111
Physical support	112
Criteria for withdrawal of assistance	114
Institutional affiliation	116

Sources of revenue	119
Sources of staff	120
6. Towards self-reliance	121
Introduction	121
The role of a contractors' association	121
External representation	122
Internal services	124
Standard-setting	124
A more radical role?	125
Alternative approaches	127
Limitations to the role of government	127
Study and evaluation	128
An institutional framework	128
A National Construction Council	129
The options	131
The zero option	132
The positive options	134
The way forward	136