

BREXIT AND LITERATURE

Critical and Cultural Responses

Edited by Robert Eaglestone

CONTENTS

Contributors	x
Preface	xvii
Acknowledgements	xix
Introduction: Brexit and literature Robert Eaglestone	1
1 The banality of Brexit Lyndsey Stonebridge	7
2 BrexLit Kristian Shaw	15
3 Autumn after the referendum Petra Rau	31
4 Do novels tell us how to vote? Sara Upstone	44
5 Poetry and Brexit Anne Varty	59

viii Contents

6	English literature saved my life Bryan Cheyette	66
7	Migrant Britain Ankhi Mukherjee	73
8	Scratching the post-imperial itch Anshuman A. Mondal	82
9	Cruel nostalgia and the memory of the Second World War Robert Eaglestone	92
10	Brexit and the aesthetics of anachronism Michael Gardiner	105
11	Fake news literary criticism J.A. Smith	118
12	The psychopolitics of Brexit Martin Murray	131
13	Brexit and the imagination Gabriel Josipovici	144
14	The lost nomad of Europe Eva Aldea	151
15	Researching Britain and Europe, then and now Ann-Marie Einhaus	160
16	Brexit and the German question Simon Glendinning	167

17	Brexit: Thinking and resistance Thomas Docherty	181
	Epilogue: The immigrant at Port Selda George Szirtes	196
	Index	207