Contents

Introduction 1

1. Mythography in Europe, 1500–1567 17
   1.1. Renaissance Perspectives on Ancient and Medieval Mythographies 20
   1.2. Renewal from the Wellsprings of Universal Learning 25
   1.3. The New Mythographies 35

2. Stephen Batman, Edmund Spenser, and Myth as an Art of Discernment 53
   2.1. The First English Mythography and its European Source 56
   2.2. A 'Strau[n]ge entermixed stratageme': Batman's Concept of Myth 58
   2.3. The Imagined Gods of the Catholics and the Family of Love 66
   2.4. The Images of the Ancient Gods 72
   2.5. Edmund Spenser and Mythological Discernment in the Bower of Bliss 77

3. In memoriam Philip Sidney: Mythopoesis in Abraham Fraunce's Amintas Dale 93
   3.1. The Structure and Textual History of Fraunce's Mythography 95
   3.2. Fashionably Nebulous: Fraunce's Concept of Myth 99
   3.3. Making Sidney into Myth 112
   3.4. Lasting Images: Daphne's Story and the Ambiguity of Closure 127

4. Truth Lost in the River of Time: Francis Bacon, Prima Philosophia, and the Greek Fables 135
   4.1. The Stem of the Tree of Knowledge 137
   4.2. Parabolic Poetry: Bacon's Concept of Myth and its Kinship with Prima Philosophia 141
   4.3. Allegory in De sapientia veterum 147
   4.4. Greek Myth and Prima Philosophia in the Revised Division of Learning 153
   4.5. Early English and European Readers of De sapientia veterum 156

5. While the Winds Breathe, Adore Echo: Henry Reynolds between Neo-Platonic and Protestant Poetics of Myth 163
   5.1. Reynolds and 'the Forme and reall Essence of true Poësy' 166
   5.2. Golden Fictions I: 'rauisht, and inflamed with diuine fury' 170
   5.3. Golden Fictions II: 'in a myste, blind and benighted' 178

Hartmann, Anna-Maria
English mythography in its European context, 1500-1650

digitalisiert durch:
IDS Basel Bern

5.4. Henry Reynolds and Giovanni Pico della Mirandola 183
5.5. Narcissus and the Divinity of Poetry 190
5.6. Henry Reynolds, English Mythography, and the Divinity of Poetry 201

6. Gods Save the King: Alexander Ross's Civil Mythography 207
6.1. 'Shall not the very Gentiles condemn them?': Ross and the Church Robbers 209
6.2. 'Apollo and a King parallel'd': Mel Heliconium to the Rescue 215
6.3. Pansebeia and the Universal Function of Religion in a Commonwealth 225

Conclusion 239
Renaissance Theories of Myth? 239
Alexander Ross's Mystagogus Poeticus and What Happened Next 243

References 251
Index of Names and Authors before 1800 273
General Index 281