

Contents

Introduction	1
Part I. The Historical Perspective
1. Historical Dimensions of the Modern Metropolitan Problem Anthony Sutcliffe	13
2. The New York Metropolis in Transformation: History and Prospect. A Study in Historical Particularity Eric E. Lampard	27
2.1. Introduction	27
2.2. The Contribution of Nieuw Amsterdam, 1609–1664: Survival	29
2.3. New York City in the British Empire: Provincial Metropolis and Entrepôt	33
2.4. Ascendant Metropolis, 1790–1836. New York: Hinge of Union	40
2.5. The Empire City: Growing Up (and Down) With the Country, 1837–1897	53
2.6. Greater New York City, 1898–1948: Hanging In	65
2.7. New York, 1948–1977: While the City Slept	72
2.8. New York–Manhattan, 1977–1984: City of Hype and Hope	81
2.9. Postscript	94
3. Long-Term Trends and Problems of Metropolitan Paris Marcel Roncayolo	111
4. Railroads, Manufacturing and Services as Decisive Factors in Shaping the Metropolis, Berlin 1850–1920 Ingrid Thienel-Saage	117
4.1. Introduction	117
4.2. The Development of the Railroad Network	117
4.3. The Location of Technologically Advanced Sectors of Manufacturing	124
4.4. The Role of High Level Services	130
4.5. Conclusions	133
5. National Capitals, World Cities and the New Division of Labour Peter Hall	135

Part II. Changes in the Spatial Structure of Economic Activity During the Last Decades and the Metropolis: Facts and Explanatory Theories

Chapter 1: General Trends	149
6. The Development of the European Urban System, 1971–1981 Paul Cheshire and Dennis Hay	149
6.1. Introduction: Stages of Urban Development	149
6.2. Developments in the EEC Since 1975	151
6.3. Berlin in the Context of Urban Change	154
6.4. Urban Development: Problem Versus Non-Problem	157
6.5. Case Study Comparisons: Cultural Capital Cities Compared to Industrial Agglomerations	162
6.6. Conclusions	166
7. The Changing Spatial Structure of Economic Activity and Metropolitan Decline in the United Kingdom David Keeble	171
7.1. Introduction	171
7.2. Metropolitan Industrial Decline	172
7.3. The Urban–Rural Population Shift	179
7.4. Theories of the Urban–Rural Manufacturing Shift	182
7.5. New Firms and High Technology Industry	187
8. Berlin and the Spatial Division of Labour within the Federal Republic of Germany Franz-Josef Bade	201
8.1. Introduction	201
8.2. Long-Term Trends in Structural Changes	203
8.3. Regional Differences in the Functional Economic Structure	207
8.4. The Role of Berlin	213
9. Economic Transformation, Minorities, and Urban Demographic–Employment Mismatch in the U.S. and West Germany John D. Kasarda and Jürgen Friedrichs	221
9.1. Introduction	221
9.2. The Problem: Immigrant Workers, Jobs, and Public Policy	222
9.3. Urban Transformation, Unemployment, and Welfare	225
9.4. Mismatch: Theoretical and Policy Issues	242
Chapter 2: Economic Development in Selected Metropolitan Areas	251
10. Restructuring and Locational Change in London’s Electronics Industries Roger Leigh, David North, and Lynn Steinberg	251
10.1 Introduction: London’s Deindustrialisation	251

10.2. The Electronics Sector: Scope and Definitions	253
10.3 The Origins and Structure of the Electronics Industries in London	255
10.4. Employment Decline and Occupational Change 1971–1983	259
10.5 The Processes of Adjustment in the London Electronics Industries	266
10.6. Some Policy Considerations	279
11. Does Paris Subsidize the Rest of France Rémy Prud'homme	285
11.1. Introduction	285
11.2. Budget Induced Transfers	287
11.3. Social Security Induced Transfers	290
11.4. Public Prices Induced Transfers	292
11.5. Conclusion	294
12. Decline of Industrial Employment in Berlin – Causes and Consequences Hans-Jürgen Ewers and Rolf Stein	297
12.1. The Problem	297
12.2. General Development Trends of the Manufacturing Sector and Their Impact on Berlin	297
12.3. Spatial Development Trends and Their Impact on Berlin	301
12.4. Future Structural Change in Berlin	303
12.5. Perspectives of Future Industrial Policy in Berlin	306

Part III. Economic Policy and the Metropolis

Chapter 1: Policies for Urban Economic Development in Advanced Industrial Countries	313
13. Overview: National Government Responses to Structural Changes in Urban Economies Joanne Fox Przeworski	313
13.1. Introduction	313
13.2. Rationale for Urban Economic Development and National Government Policies	314
13.3 Nature of National Government Responses	316
13.4. Conclusions	325
14. Policies to Stimulate Urban Economic Activity in the United States – The Case of Detroit Harold Wolman	327
14.1. Introduction	327
14.2. Economic Decline in Detroit	327

14.3. National Policies	330
14.4. State and Local Policies	332
14.5. Conclusion	333
15. The Growth of the Paris Region, Town Planning and the National Policy of Locational Control (1920–1984)
Pierre Merlin	337
15.1. Introduction	337
15.2. The Origins of the Policy to Restrict the Growth of Paris	337
15.3. The Policy of Decentralization and the P.A.D.O.G.	338
15.4. The Response of the Paris Region	342
15.5. Administrative Decentralization and Centres of Industrial Conversion	346
16. Economic Development Policy in London
William Lever	349
16.1. Introduction	349
16.2. The Changing Structure of London's Economy	350
16.3. Economic Policy in London	354
16.4. The Neo-Keynesian Approach	355
16.5. The Urban Programme, 1978	355
16.6. Premises and Property	361
16.7. Urban Development Grant	362
16.8. A Case Study of Local Authority Assistance: Southwark	363
16.9. Market-Based Approaches	364
16.10. The Socialist Approach	366
16.11. Conclusions: The Future	367
17. Policies for Urban Economic Development in the Federal Republic of Germany
Manfred Konukiewicz	371
17.1. Looking Back: Policies for Urban Growth	371
17.2. Responses to Urban Economic Decline	372
17.3. Regional Impacts of Sectoral Policies	375
17.4. The Role of the Länder	379
18. Evaluation of Recent Policy Innovations in Berlin (West)
Manfred Kern	381
18.1. Introduction	381
18.2. The New Structural Policy of the Berlin Senate	382
18.3. Main Features of the Berlin Promotion Law	382
18.4. Preliminary Evaluation of the Amended Berlin Promotion Law	384
18.5. The Berlin Innovation Policy	384
18.6. Preliminary Evaluation of the Berlin Innovation Policy	386

Chapter 2: Economic Transformation and Political Change in Metropolitan Areas	391
19. The Advanced Industrial Metropolis: A New Type of World City Richard V. Knight	391
19.1. Introduction	391
19.2. The Role of Cities in Advanced Industrial Societies	395
19.3. Knowledge Resources and Economic Development	413
19.4. Industrial Regions and the Global Challenge	421
19.5. City Development in the Context of the Global Economy	428
19.6. Conclusion	434
20. Big City Politics – New Patterns and Orientations at the Local Level of the Welfare State Adalbert Evers and Hellmut Wollmann	437
20.1. Introductory Remarks	437
20.2. Challenges for Redefining the Welfare State and Repercussions on Local Government	438
20.3. Mapping the yet Uncertain Future of a “New Municipal Interventionism”	455
Chapter 3: Development Options and Constraints for the Economic Future of Berlin (West)	463
21. Metropolitan Development to and Beyond 2000 – Some Hypotheses applied to the City of Berlin Rainer Mackensen	463
21.1. Metropolitan Decline	463
21.2. The Abel-Study	464
21.3. Ranges of Prospect	464
21.4. Hypotheses of Long Range Urban Change	465
21.5. Perspectives for the City of Berlin	466
22. Alternative Development Paths for the Economy of Berlin (West) – Reflections on Different Scenarios Hartmut E. Arras	471
22.1. A City at the Turning Point?	471
22.2. Where can the Development Lead? Something About Forecasts and Scenarios	472
22.3. Scenarios for Berlin – Basic Structures	473
22.4. Which Divergencies Will Ensur?	476
The Authors	479