

Introduction	vii
1 Hiberno-Rossica: ‘knowledge in the clouds’ in Old Irish and Old Russian	1
2 Cú Roí and Svyatogor: a study in chthonic	15
3 Autochthons and otherworlds in Celtic and Slavic	27
4 The significance of pentads in Early Irish and Indian sources: the case of five directions	43
5 The five primeval trees in Early Irish, Gnostic and Manichaean cosmologies	57
6 The alliterative poem Eó Rossa from the Dindšenchas	69
7 The Dindšenchas of Irarus: the king, the druid and the probable tree	77
8 The king in exile in Airne Fíngein: power and pursuit in Early Irish literature ..	99
9 Conn Céchathach: the image of ideal kingship in Early Medieval Ireland	113
10 Búaid Cuinn, rígróit rogaidi—an alliterative poem from the Dindšenchas	127
11 Roads and knowledge in Togail Bruidne Da Derga	155
12 Oral past and written present in ‘The Finding of the Táin’	175
13 The migration of the soul in Early Irish tales	183
14 Goidelic hydronyms in Ptolemy’s Geography: myth behind the name	197
15 Swineherds in Celtic lands	205
16 Fintan mac Bóchra: Irish synthetic history revisited	217
Bibliography	237
Index of Personal Names and Ethnonyms	271
Index of Places and Rivers	275
Index of Texts and Manuscripts	278
General Index	280