

Contents

List of Abbreviations — XI

List of Figures and Tables — XII

Preface — XIII

Acknowledgements — XIX

Introduction — 1

- 1 The Arabic Fate of Aristotle's Physics — 9
  - 1.1 Transmission and Translation — 10
  - 1.2 The Commentators on the Aristotelian Text — 20
  - 1.3 On Avicenna's Copy of the Physics — 37

- 2 The Methodology of Teaching and Learning — 43
  - 2.1 The Method of Physics — 43
  - 2.2 Method and Principles between Physics and Metaphysics — 81

- 3 The Subject-Matter of Physics — 111
  - 3.1 Body, Substance, and Corporeality — 114
  - 3.2 Matter and Form as Common Principles — 154
  - 3.3 Change and an Additional Principle — 201

- 4 Nature and Power — 213
  - 4.1 Nature, and Soul, in the Greek Philosophical Tradition — 213
  - 4.2 Avicenna's Commentary on Physics II.1, 192b20–23 — 225
  - 4.3 Avicenna, and Philoponus, on Inclination — 240
  - 4.4 Bad Readings of Aristotle — 252
  - 4.5 Avicenna's Account of Nature and its Relation to Soul — 280

- 5 Putting Surface Back into Place — 307
  - 5.1 A Troubled Account of Place — 311
  - 5.2 Clarifying Aristotle's Troubled Account of Place — 326
  - 5.3 Eliminating Void and Space — 367

- 6 Time and Temporality in the Physical World — 429
  - 6.1 A New Approach to an Old Definition — 431
  - 6.2 The Before and After — 462

- 6.3           Continuity and the Cause of Time — 477
- 6.4           Avicenna's Neoplatonic Peripateticism — 509
- 6.5           The "Flowing Now" in Avicenna's Account of Time — 515

Conclusion — 525

Bibliography — 533

Index — 585