

Contents

The author and series editors	xv
Foreword	xvi

PART ONE

Introduction: questions that need answering

Chapter 1 Questions about cohesion

1.1 The aim of this book	3
1.2 The nature of cohesion	3
1.3 Questions concerning the place of cohesion	10
Question 1: cohesion and coherence	11
Question 2: cohesion and sentence relationships	12
Question 3: cohesion and text organization	13
1.4 Work relevant to the questions	14
Hasan (1984)	14
Winter (1974, 1979)	16
Phillips (1985)	21
1.5 A way forward	25

Chapter 2 A metaphor for text organization

2.1 The aim of this chapter	26
2.2 Sentence as a metaphor for text	26
2.3 An alternative metaphor	30
2.4 A simple example	35
The repetition links: sentence 1	36
The repetition links: sentence 2	38
The repetition links: sentence 3	39
The repetition links: sentence 4	40
2.5 A representation of the repetition patterning	41
2.6 Unwanted cohesion	42
2.7 Interpretation of the patterning: central and marginal sentences	43
2.8 Interpretation of the patterning: common ground between sentences	45
2.9 Conclusions	48

PART TWO

Answers from text analysis

Chapter 3 Types of repetition

3.1	The aim of this chapter	51
3.2	Repetition as links	51
3.3	Simple lexical repetition	52
3.4	Complex lexical repetition	55
3.5	Text-forming versus 'chance' lexical repetition	56
3.6	Simple paraphrase	62
3.7	Complex paraphrase and the link triangle	64
3.8	Superordinate, hyponymic, and co-reference repetition	69
3.9	Other ways of repeating	70
	Personal pronouns	71
	Demonstrative pronouns and modifiers	72
	Other substitution links	73
3.10	A last look at the 'collection of texts' metaphor	75

Chapter 4 Patterns of repetition in non-narrative text

4.1	The aim of this chapter	76
4.2	The data	78
4.3	Identification of repetition links	81
4.4	Construction of a repetition matrix	84
4.5	Creation of a net of bonds	91
4.6	An extension to the data	94
4.7	Conclusions	99

Chapter 5 The significance of repetition nets

5.1	The aim of this chapter	100
5.2	The removal of certain features of cohesion	100
5.3	The net as record of bonding	104
5.4	Marginal sentences	105
	Sentences 5, 9, and 10	106
	Sentence 18	107
	Sentence 27	108
	Sentences 30 and 31	108
	Sentence 13	109
	Abridgement: procedure 1 (marginal sentences)	113

5.5	Central sentences	113
	Abridgement: procedure 2 (central sentences)	114
5.6	Topic opening and topic closing	118
	Clear topic-opening sentences	119
	Clear topic-closing sentences	120
	Other topic openings and closings	121
5.7	Conclusions	124

Chapter 6 Properties of the bonds of the nets

6.1	The aim of this chapter	125
6.2	Claims for the bonds	125
6.3	Testing the strong claim	127
	Sentences 1 and 4	127
	Sentences 1 and 7	128
	Sentences 1 and 17	129
	Sentences 17 and 24	130
	Sentences 19 and 26	130
	Sentences 20 and 38	130
	Sentences 21 and 23	131
	Sentences 23 and 36	132
	Sentences 23 and 38	132
	Sentences 25 and 28	133
6.4	Testing the weak claim	133
	Excessive repetition	134
	The effect of voice choice	136
	The effect of modal choice	136
	The effect of given–new relationships	138
	The role of context	141
6.5	Abridgement: procedure 3 (topic-controlling sentences)	142
	Sentence 17: summary	143
	Sentence 38: first summary	144
	Sentence 38: second summary	146
	Sentence 1: summary	147
6.6	Distance bonding	149
6.7	Bonding and reader creativity	152
6.8	Bonding and writer creativity	155
6.9	Conclusions	159

Chapter 7 How the links work

7.1	The aim of this chapter	162
7.2	How the pairs are related	162
7.3	Processes in the creation of parallelism	167
	Lexical expansion	170
	Lexical reduction	170
	Lexical transference	171
	Lexical substitution	171
	Syntactic equivalence	171
	Discoursal expansion	172
7.4	Exemplification of the processes of parallelism	174
	Sentences 17 and 24	174
	Sentences 19 and 26	176
	Sentences 21 and 23	179
7.5	Conclusions	183

PART THREE

Implications for theory and practice

Chapter 8 Implications for a theory of language

8.1	The aim of this chapter	187
8.2	Claims about the nature of text	188
8.3	Text as structure versus text as organization	193
8.4	Halliday's map of language (1961)	194
8.5	The meaning of context in Halliday (1961)	196
8.6	A revision of Halliday's map of language	198
8.7	The place of monologue in a map of language study	202
8.8	The place of lexis in a map of language study	206
8.9	Implications of our map of language	209
8.10	Further symmetries in our map of language	210
	Reference to adjacent areas	210
	The relationship of speech and writing	211
	Grammar and discourse	211
	Sentence and morpheme	214
	Relationships across the map of language	217
8.11	Conclusions	220

Chapter 9 Implications for reading and writing

9.1	The aim of this chapter	221
9.2	The reader's active role	221
9.3	Typical reading purposes	223
9.4	Typical reading strategies	224
9.5	Reading quickly and reading carefully	225
9.6	Identifying relevant sentences	226
9.7	Getting sense out of a text	231
9.8	Rough and ready analyses	235
9.9	Reading for reference	236
9.10	The teaching of lexis	240
9.11	Repetition and writing	242
9.12	Conclusions	245
Appendix I		246
Appendix II		249
Appendix III		253
Appendix IV		254
Appendix V		255
Bibliography		258
Glossary		265
Notes		270
Index		273