

Contents

List of illustrations	vii
Series editor's preface	viii
Acknowledgements	x
List of abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	1
Research questions	3
The literature on AFTA – strengths and limitations	5
Drawing on the wider regionalism literature	15
The book in outline	18
1 Globalisation and economic regionalism	24
Conceptualising globalisation	25
Open regionalism: the liberal political economy interpretation	32
Regionalism as resistance to globalisation: legitimacy and domestic politics	35
Conceptual gains from the economic realist perspective on IPE	37
Conceptualising domestic politics in ASEAN	43
Conclusion	47
2 The unfolding of a regional economic cooperation project: AFTA, 1991–2002	50
Ambitious commitments	50
The status of implementation	64
AFTA in perspective	76
3 Foreign capital and open regionalism	78
The structural power of foreign capital	79
FDI in the domestic political economy: reinforcing the structural power of foreign capital	82

vi Contents

Creating an alternative regional space in the Asia-Pacific for investment and production 88

AFTA: a neoliberal regionalist project? 92

Conclusion: contradictions and inconsistencies 98

4 Domestic capital and developmental regionalism 99

National FDI regimes in ASEAN 101

Globalisation and multilateral investment rules 106

Using the AIA as a developmental tool 112

The political importance of domestic capital in ASEAN 116

The growth imperative overwhelms: reviewing the AIA 124

Conclusion 127

5 Re-negotiating AFTA commitments 128

Resistance to AFTA: a general survey 128

Tariff liberalisation of petrochemicals in AFTA 132

Liberalisation of unprocessed agricultural products 138

AFTA and automobiles 143

Conclusion 150

6 Implementation as a political process 151

*Implementation as a political process: the role of compliance
bargaining* 152

Compliance bargaining in AFTA 154

*Institution building in AFTA: an outcome of compliance
bargaining* 158

Conclusion 170

Conclusion 171

Globalisation, domestic politics and AFTA 172

AFTA and the wider literature: conceptual insights on the globalisation–regionalism relationship 174

The future of ASEAN economic regionalism 179

Notes 187

References 203

Index 218