

Contents

Introduction	vii
Zygmunt Frajzyngier and David S. Rood
1. What are we typologists doing?	1
Gilbert Lazard
2. The canonical approach in typology	25
Greville G. Corbett
3. What is an empirical theory of linguistic meaning a theory of?	51
Pierre-Yves Raccah
4. Language processes, theory and description of language change, and building on the past	81
Robert Nicolai
5. On the part played by human conscious choice in language structure and language evolution	105
Claude Hagège
6. The challenge of polygrammaticalization for linguistic theory	119
Stéphane Robert
7. On discourse frequency, grammar, and grammaticalization	143
Regina Pustet
8. On the assumption of the sentence as the basic unit of syntactic structure	169
Marianne Mithun
9. Adpositions as a non-universal category	185
Scott DeLancey
10. Understanding antigemination	203
Juliette Blevins
11. What it means to be rare: The variability of person marking	235
Michael Cysouw
12. The principle of Functional Transparency in language structure and in language evolution	259
Zygmunt Frajzyngier
13. The importance of discourse analysis for linguistic theory	285
Liang Tao

14. Compounding theories and linguistic diversity Anders Sogaard	319
15. Inalienability and possessum individuation Frantisek Lichtenberk	339
16. Resultativeness in English Marina Gorlach	363
17. Encoding speaker perspective: Evidentials Ferdinand de Haan	379
18. Distinguishing between referential and grammatical function in morphological typology Edward J. Vajda	399
Index	423