

Creole Languages and Language Acquisition

edited by

Herman Wekker

Mouton de Gruyter
Berlin · New York 1996

Contents

Introduction: Creole languages and language acquisition Herman Wekker	1
 Part I: Creolization as first-language acquisition
Small steps or large leaps? Undergeneralization and overgeneralization in creole acquisition Jean Aitchison	9
Creoles and the bankruptcy of current acquisition theory Derek Bickerton	33
Comment on Bickerton's paper Thomas Roeper	45
Ambient language and learner output in a creole environment Lawrence D. Carrington	51
Creole languages and parameter setting: A case study using Haitian Creole and the pro-drop parameter Michel F. DeGraff	65
 Part II: Creolization as second-language acquisition
Does creologeny really recapitulate ontogeny? Mervyn C. Alleyne	109
The making of a language from a lexical point of view Geert Koefoed – Jacqueline Tarenskeen	119
Creolization and the acquisition of English as a second language Herman Wekker	139

Part III: Creolization as relexification

The functional category “agreement” and creole genesis Claire Lefebvre	153
On the acquisition of nominal structures in the genesis of Haitian Creole John S. Lumsden	185