

READING THE RENAISSANCE
CULTURE, POETICS, AND DRAMA

EDITED BY JONATHAN HART

GARLAND PUBLISHING, INC.
NEW YORK AND LONDON
1996

CONTENTS

Reading the Renaissance: An Introduction Jonathan Hart	1
1. The Text, the Reader, and the Self
Ritual and Text in the Renaissance Thomas M. Greene	17
Reading in the French Renaissance: Textual Communities, Boredom, Privacy Steven Rendall	35
Reading Ultima Verba : Commemoration and Friendship in Montaigne's Writing Lisa Neal	45
2. Gender and Genre
Gender Ideologies, Women Writers, and the Problem of Patronage in Early Modern Italy and France: Issues and Frameworks Carla Freccero	65
Female Transvestism and Male Self-Fashioning in As You Like It and La vida es sueño Katy Emck	75

3. Continuities and Discontinuities

The Ends of Renaissance Comedy Jonathan Hart	91
Troilus and Cressida : Voices in the Darkness of Troy Robert Rawdon Wilson and Edward Milowicki	129
Two Tents on Bosworth Field: Richard III V.iii, iv, v Harry Levin	145
As They Did in the Golden World: Romantic Rapture and Semantic Rupture in As You Like It Keir Elam	163

4. Anticipations

Noble Deeds and the Secret Singularity: Hamlet and Phèdre Paul Morrison	179
Narrative and Theatre: From Manuel Puig to Lope de Vega Richard A. Young	203
Notes	219
Works Cited	247
Contributors	267
Index	269