
The Challenge of Direct Democracy

The 1992 Canadian Referendum

RICHARD JOHNSTON

ANDRÉ BLAIS

ELISABETH GIDENGIL

NEIL NEVITTE

McGill-Queen's University Press
Montreal & Kingston • London • Buffalo

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	3
1 The Challenge of Direct Democracy	9
2 Coming Through Charlottetown	42
3 The Charlottetown Accord as a Coalition	75
4 Beyond Coalition-Building	96
5 Locating the Accord	116
6 Polls and Expectations: Further Explorations in Campaign Dynamics	143
7 Social Structure and Sentiment	160
8 Why Did Quebec Say No?	192
9 "Know More": Education, Knowledge, and the Vote	219
10 Simple Majorities in Complex Societies: Direct Democracy and High Politics	252
11 Conclusions	275
Appendix A: Design of the 1992 Sample	287
Appendix B: 1992-3 Canadian Referendum and Election Survey	289

vi Contents

Notes 295

Bibliography 325

Index 335