

Forgetting in Early Modern English Literature and Culture

Lethe's legacies

Edited by Christopher Ivic and Grant Williams

Contents

List of figures	vii
List of contributors	viii
Acknowledgments	x

Introduction: sites of forgetting in early modern English literature and culture	1
GRANT WILLIAMS AND CHRISTOPHER IVIC

PART I Embodiments 19

1 The decay of memory	21
WILLIAM E. ENGEL
2 Lethargic corporeality on and off the early modern stage	41
GARRETT A. SULLIVAN JR
3 Pleasure's oblivion: displacements of generation in Spenser's Faerie Queene	53
ELIZABETH D. HARVEY

PART II Signs 65

4 Textual crudities in Robert Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy and Thomas Browne's Pseudodoxia Epidemica	67
GRANT WILLIAMS
5 Off the subject: early modern poets on rhyme, distraction, and forgetfulness	83
AMANDA WATSON

PART III

Narratives

97

- 6 Reassuring fratricide in 1 Henry IV

99

CHRISTOPHER IVIC

- 7 "The religion I was born in": forgetting Catholicism and remembering the king in Donne's Devotions

110

DAVID J. BAKER

- 8 Legends of oblivion: enchantment and enslavement in Book 6 of Spenser's Faerie Queene

122

ELIZABETH MAZZOLA

PART IV

Localities

135

- 9 Nomadic Eros: remapping knowledge in A Midsummer Night's Dream

137

PHILIPPA BERRY

- 10 "Unless you could teach me to forget": spectatorship, self-forgetting, and subversion in antitheatrical literature and As You Like It

151

ZACKARIAH LONG

- 11 Reading reformed: Spenser and the problem of the English library

165

JENNIFER SUMMIT

Bibliography

179

Index

193