

Politics and Post-colonial Theory

African inflections

Pal Ahluwalia

London and New York

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
Post-colonialism, post-structuralism and postmodernism	1
Post-colonialism and Africa	8
Post-colonialism beyond literary studies	14
Scope and organisation	18
1 'Negritude and nativism': in search of identity	20
Senghor's negritude	23
Césaire's negritude	27
Critiques of negritude	30
Conclusion	32
2 Decolonisation and national liberation	34
Frantz Fanon: the oppressed consciousness of the colonised	39
Edward Said and resistance	43
Fanon and Said: a strategy towards liberation	49
Conclusion	50
3 Modernity and the problem of the nation-state	52
The crisis of the African state	53
African studies and the conceptualisation of the African state	55
Post-colonialism, modernity and the African state	66
Conclusion	71

4	Striving for democratisation: the complexities of civil society and human rights	73
	The rise of authoritarian rule 74
	African perspectives on 'good governance' 76
	The centrality of civil society 77
	Human rights in Africa 86
	The African Charter of Rights 92
	Conclusion 95
5	Citizenship, subjectivity and the crisis of modernity	97
	Citizen and subject: the argument 98
	Problems with the Mamdani thesis 102
	The complexities of citizenship and subjectivity 105
	Citizenship and subjectivity: post-colonial reflections 108
	Conclusion 112
6	Globalisation and post-colonialism: towards the reconstitution of identity	113
	Culture and globalisation 117
	Post-colonialism and globalisation 122
	Globalisation and inflections 124
	Conclusion 130
7	Afterword	132
	Notes	136
	Works cited	142
	Index	158