

NEW DIRECTIONS IN ORAL THEORY

edited by

Mark C. Amodio

Arizona Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies
Tempe, Arizona
2005

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	vii
Abbreviations	ix
Introduction: Unbinding Proteus Mark C. Amodio, Vassar College	1
Part I: Ancient Greek and Latin
Fieldwork on Homer John Miles Foley, University of Missouri, Columbia	15
Homer's Iliad and Odyssey : From Oral Performance to Written Text Steve Reece, St. Olaf College	43
Orality and Aristotle's Aesthetics Daniel F. Melia, University of California, Berkeley	91
Proteus in Latin: Vernacular Tradition and the Boniface Collection Alexandra Hennessey Olsen, University of Denver	107
Oral-Formulaic Tradition and the Composition of Latin Poetry from Antiquity through the Twelfth Century Jan M. Ziolkowski, Harvard University	125
Part II: Old English, Middle English, and Middle Welsh
Deaths and Transformations: Thinking through the 'End' of Old English Verse Katherine O'Brien O'Keeffe, University of Notre Dame	149

Res(is)ting the Singer: Towards a Non-Performative Anglo-Saxon Oral Poetics	179
Mark C. Amodio
Writing Out "Óðinn's Storm": The Literary Reception of an Oral-Derived Template in the Two Versions of Lazamon's Brut	209
Jonathan Watson, Manchester College
A Leash and an Englyn in the Medieval Welsh Arthurian Tale Culhwch ac Olwen	237
Joseph Falaky Nagy, University of California, Los Angeles
The Role of Proverbs in Middle English Narrative	255
Lori Ann Garner, University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana
Writing the Failure of Speech in Pearl	279
Tim William Machan, Marquette University
Bibliography	307
About the Contributors	339