

Marcin Krygier/Liliana Sikorska (eds.)

The Propur Langage of Englische Men

Ewa Ciszek & Łukasz Hudomięt
(assistants to the editors)

PETER LANG

Internationaler Verlag der Wissenschaften

Contents

Language	7
1. Elżbieta Adamczyk (Adam Mickiewicz University) On the (in)stability of the Old English weak declension	9
2. Agnieszka Pysz (Adam Mickiewicz University) True or false? Postposition of adjectives in Old English	29
3. Artur Bartnik (Catholic University of Lublin) Functional projections in Old English: DP and NumP	55
Literature	67
4. Liliana Sikorska (Adam Mickiewicz University) “ zef thou be not grete clerk, loke thou moste on thys werk ”: Religious and secular guidance in William Caxton’s Book of curtesye and John Mirk’s Instructions for parish priests	69
5. Christine M. Rose (Portland State University) Glossing Griselda in a medieval conduct book: Le ménagier de Paris	81
6. Barbara Kowalik (Warsaw University) Mary as Anglo-Saxon Dryhtin and Norman patroness: A fusion of cultural and literary influences in On god ureisun of ure lefdi	105
7. Rafał Boryslawski (University of Silesia, Katowice) Wordhordes cræft: Confusion and the order of the wor(l)d in Old English gnomes	119
8. Anna Czarnowus (University of Silesia, Katowice) Oriental despotism in The Sowdone of Babylone	133