

Introduction to Media Studies

Eckart Voigts-Virchow

Ernst Klett Sprachen
Barcelona · Belgrad · Budapest · Ljubljana · London
Posen · Prag · Sofia · Stuttgart · Zagreb

Contents

Chapter 1	A basic outline of media studies	5
	1 Preface – Why media studies?	5
	2 The expansion of media studies	6
	3 Medium/media – definitions and concepts	16
Chapter 2	Media communication: models, schools, and theories	26
	1 Transmission models: Lasswell and Shannon/Weaver	26
	2 US communication studies and Maletzke's field of communication	29
	3 Toronto School, media determinism and systems theory	38
	4 A circular model of media communication	43
Chapter 3	Media signs and cultural studies	48
	1 Semiotics and cultural studies: From Barthes to Hall	48
	2 Cultural studies and media cultures	53
	3 Case studies in broadcasting and televisuality	63
Chapter 4	Intermediality	79
	1 From primary intermediality to secondary intermediality	79
	2 The intermedial turn: New terminologies	81
	3 Intermedial contact: Some examples	87
	4 Media transfers: The case of Shakespeare	91
	5 Media transfers: Screenplays and adaptation	93
	6 Narrating novels vs. narrating films	97
Chapter 5	Visuality, orality, literacy	107
	1 Visual studies and the visual turn	107
	2 From orality to literacy: Media history and media differentiation	116
	3 Literacy, memory and electronic media	120
Chapter 6	'New media' and cybercultures	126
	1 Computer-based media and Internet: History and basics	126
	2 Cybercultures and cyberarts	130
Chapter 7	Conclusion	140
Appendix	Bibliography	143
	1 Foundations of media and communication studies	143
	2 Literary studies, cultural studies, media studies and Anglistik	147
	3 Intermediality, media hybridity, media transfer and adaptation	149

4	Film	151
5	Television	153
6	Orality, Literacy, Memory	155
7	New Media, Digital Media, Hypermedia, Cybercultures .	155
8	Radio, Telephone, Sound, Voice	157
9	Visual Studies	157
10	Study and Career Guides	159
11	Web Resources	159