

Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Preface xi

- I The Destruction of Knowledge in the Prescientific
Literary Imagination 1
- 1 The Emersonian Myth of Knowledge in the New World 5
 - 2 Walt Whitman and the World Beyond Rationalism 16
 - 3 Herman Melville and the Failure of Higher Truth 31
 - 4 Emily Dickinson and the Destruction of the Language of Knowledge 51
- II Science and the Knowledge of Knowing 65
- 5 Scientists and Their Knowledge 69
 - 6 Science and the Epistemologists 76
- III Realisms in a Relativistic World 101
- 7 Literary and Philosophical Realisms: Uncertain Paths
Toward Certainty 105
 - 8 Stephen Crane and Robert Frost: Nonreflexive Perception and Dehumanized Universe 121
- IV The Revolution in Visual Arts 145
- 9 The Artistic Process and the Wider Event 157

V	The American Writer in the Age of Epistemology	175
10	Gertrude Stein and the Splendid Century	179
11	Ezra Pound and Ernest Hemingway: The Discipline of Destruction	208
12	Conrad Aiken and Wallace Stevens: The Mind Watches the Mind Hunting the Real	231
13	William Carlos Williams: Thinking a World Without Thought	270
14	John Dos Passos: Actuality Montage (the Real Event and the Speech of the People)	311
	Notes	353
	Bibliography	372
	Index	383