

Civil War, Civil Peace

B/75724

Edited by Helen Yanacopoulos and Joseph Hanlon

The Open University
Milton Keynes, United Kingdom

in association with

James Currey
Oxford, United Kingdom

Ohio University Research in International Studies
Global and Comparative Studies Series No. 5
Ohio University Press
Athens

Contents

Introduction	7
Joseph Hanlon and Helen Yanacopoulos
I 200 wars and the humanitarian response	18
Joseph Hanlon
1.1 Introduction	18
1.2 Definitions and the Humpty Dumpty problem	21
1.3 Humanitarianism	32
1.4 Nightingale's risk	37
1.5 Ethics and choices	44
1.6 Chapter summary	46
2 Intervention	49
Joseph Hanlon
2.1 Introduction	49
2.2 Postwar peacekeeping by agreement	51
2.3 Aid agencies and war	58
2.4 Forcible humanitarian intervention and the end of sovereignty	60
2.5 The responsibility to protect	65
2.6 Chapter summary	70
3 Roots of civil war: tick 'all of the above'	72
Joseph Hanlon
3.1 Introduction	72
3.2 Weak states and issues around state building	78
3.3 Democracy	84
3.4 Favourable conditions	85
3.5 Environment and migration	88
3.6 Chapter summary	91
4 Ethnicity and identity	95
Joseph Hanlon
4.1 Introduction	95
4.2 Ethnicity: innate or malleable?	97
4.3 International relations and the 'ethnic security dilemma'	101
4.4 Does the ethnic lens help our understanding?	103
4.5 Chapter summary	109
5 External roots of internal war	113
Joseph Hanlon
5.1 Introduction	113
5.2 International actors – colonial wars, proxy wars and neighbours	115
5.3 Globalisation	119
5.4 Arms and oil	125
5.5 The greed versus grievance debate	128
5.6 Implications for weak states and state building	130
5.7 Chapter summary	133

6	The social contract and violent conflict	137
	Tony Addison and S. Mansoob Murshed
6.1	Introduction	137
6.2	A framework for understanding violent conflict	137
6.3	Development failure as a cause of violent conflict	146
6.4	Inequality and the social contract	151
6.5	Conclusion	158
6.6	Chapter summary	160
7	Greed versus grievance: conjoined twins or discrete drivers of violent conflict?	164
	Christopher Cramer
7.1	An introduction to the neoclassical economic theory of violence and war	164
7.2	Analytical boundaries and false distinctions	165
7.3	Evolution of the greed versus grievance debate	168
7.4	Social science or smoke and mirrors?	173
7.5	Collective action	178
7.6	Conclusion	181
7.7	Chapter summary	182
8	Reflections on development in a context of war	185
	Alan Thomas
8.1	'Don't just do something – stand there!'	185
8.2	Development and war	186
8.3	Meanings of 'development'	188
8.4	Competing visions of development in a war context	192
8.5	War and development as historic change	197
8.6	Deliberate improvement in a war context	198
8.7	Conclusion	202
8.8	Chapter summary	203
9	Power, agency and identity: turning vicious circles into virtuous ones	206
	Judy El-Bushra
9.1	Introduction	206
9.2	Power, democracy and the Western model of the state	207
9.3	Power, patriarchy and gender identity	212
9.4	Power and social relations – a case study	222
9.5	The challenge of social transformation	226
9.6	Conclusion	229
9.7	Chapter summary	230
10	Transforming power relations: peacebuilding and institutions	233
	Judy El-Bushra
10.1	Introduction	233
10.2	Conflict transformation	234
10.3	Reconstructing power relations (1): gender and age as axes of social organisation	237
10.4	Reconstructing power relations (2): the state, civil society, and the international community	247

10.5	Conclusion	255
10.6	Chapter summary	256
11	Preparing to intervene	259
	Jonathan Goodhand
11.1	Introduction	259
11.2	Preparing to intervene: understanding the context	266
11.3	Chapter summary	278
12	Working 'in' and 'on' war	280
	Jonathan Goodhand
12.1	Introduction	280
12.2	Programming challenges	280
12.3	Organisational challenges	301
12.4	Relationship-building challenges	304
12.5	How well am I doing?	307
12.6	Conclusion	310
12.7	Chapter summary	311
	Conclusion: understanding as a guide to action	314
	Joseph Hanlon and Helen Yanacopulos
	Individuals matter	319
	Acknowledgements	321
	Index	323