

Contents

Lothar Hönnighausen (Bonn)

Introduction: Aspects of Rewriting the South xi

I. Methods, Surveys, Comparisons

Charles Reagan Wilson (University, Miss.)

The Invention of Southern Tradition: The Writing and Ritualization of Southern History, 1880-1940 3

Anne Firor Scott (Durham, N.C.)

Women in the South: History as Fiction,
Fiction as History 22

Susan V. Donaldson (Williamsburg, Va.)

Gender and the Profession of Letters in the South 35

François L. Pitavy (Dijon)

History and Fiction: Family Quarrel/Family Reunion 47

Jack Temple Kirby (Oxford, Ohio)

Creating the History of Decline: John Taylor,
Edmund Ruffin, and Avery Craven as Historian-Reformers 62

Valeria Gennaro Lerda (Genoa)

Rewriting the Post-bellum Plantation South: Change and Continuity
in Recent American Historiography 78

II. The Antebellum South

Claus Daufenbach (Bonn)

"The Eye Composes Itself": Text and Terrain
in Jefferson's Virginia 99

Charles H. Adams (Fayetteville, Ark.)

William Bartram's Travels: A Natural History of the South 112

Jan Nordby Gretlund (Odense)

1835: The First Annus Mirabilis of Southern Fiction 121

Clara Juncker (Frederiksberg)

Southern Sojourn: Frances Anne Kemble 131

Michael O'Brien (Oxford, Ohio)

On the Writing of History in the Old South 141

III. The Civil War and After

Ursula Brumm (Berlin)

Definitions of Southern Identity in the Civil War Novels
of John Esten Cooke 169

M. Thomas Inge (Ashland, Va.)

Sam Watkins and the Fictionality of Fact 176

Dorothy M. Scura (Knoxville)

Ellen Glasgow's The Battle-Ground: Civil War Richmond
in Fiction and History 185

IV. Transitions: The Twentieth Century

Walter B. Edgar (Columbia, S.C.)

The Circle of the Charleston Poetry Society and the Creation of the Image of the Carolina Lowcountry 199

John T. Matthews (Boston)

The Sacrifice of History in the New Criticism of Cleanth Brooks 210

Stuart Kidd (Reading)

The Farm Security Administration Photographic Project's
Reinvention of the Southern Poor White in the 1930s 219

Utz Riese (Berlin)

The Past as the Tense of Poetry: I'll Take My Stand
and the Fictionalization of Modernity 231

Robert H. Brinkmeyer, Jr. (University, Miss.)

Fascism, the Democratic Revival, and the Southern Writer 244

James C. Cobb (Knoxville)

"Mind" in the Mainstream: The Mind of the South
and the Mind of the Nation, 1941-1991 251

Tony Badger (Cambridge)

The Modernization of the South:
The Lament for Rural Worlds Lost 272

Dan T. Carter (Atlanta)

Southern History, American Fiction: The Secret Life of Southwestern Novelist Forrest Carter 286

V. William Faulkner

Richard Gray (Colchester)

History as Autobiography: An Approach to the Fiction
of William Faulkner 307

Dan Ford (Monticello, Ark.)

"He Was Talking About Truth": Faulkner in Pursuit of the Old Verities 317

Thomas L. McHaney (Atlanta)

Faulkner's Cosmos and the Incarnation of History in Light in August 324

Lothar Hönnighausen (Bonn)

Faulkner Rewriting the Indian Removal 335

André Bleikasten (Strasbourg)

The Novelist as Historian in Requiem for a Nun 344

VI. From the Fifties to the Present

Lewis A. Lawson (College Park, Md.)

Walker Percy's South(s) 359

Arno Heller (Innsbruck)

Within and Beyond the Southern Tradition: Walker Percy 371

Elzbieta H. Oleksy (Lodz)

"The Inexorable Plot of Racism": The Case of Abigail Howland 382

Friederike Hajek (Berlin)

Margaret Walker's Jubilee: Oral History, the Fiction of Literacy, and the Language of a Black Text 391

Gerhard Hoffmann (Wuerzburg)

Historical Consciousness, Aesthetics and the Experimental Southern Novel 397

Noel Polk (Hattiesburg, Miss.)

Upon Being Southernized: My Town, My Department,
My Friends, and Me in a Carpetbagger Novel 425

Notes on Contributors 435