

CONTENTS

Introduction	1
Jonathan Wroot and Andy Willis
Part I The Cult Business: Creating Consumption
Battle Royale as a One-Film Franchise: Charting a Commercial Phenomenon Through Cult DVD and Blu-ray Releases	11
Jonathan Wroot
Whose Canon is it Anyway?: Subcultural Capital, Cultural Distinction and Value in High Art and Low Culture Film Distribution	31
Mark McKenna
A “Cult-like” Following: Nordic Noir, Nordicana and Arrow Films’ Bridging of Subcultural/Neocultural Capital	49
Matt Hills

Restoration, Restoration, Restoration: Charting the Changing Appearance of The Good, the Bad and the Ugly on British Home Video Lee Broughton	67
It's Only Teenage Wasteland: The Home Media Revival of Freaks and Geeks Katie Barnett	85
Part II Cult Practices: The Consumption and Reception of Cult Media
Cult Fandom and Experiential Cinema E. W. Nikdel	105
Pirates and Proprietary Rights: Perceptions of 'Ownership' and Media Objects Within Filesharing Communities Virginia Crisp	125
On Vidding: The Home Media Archive and Vernacular Historiography E. Charlotte Stevens	143
The Dragon Lives Again: Distributing 'Bruceploitation' via Home Entertainment Oliver Carter and Simon Barber	161
Bollywood DVD: The Relationship Between Distributive Technology and Content in Transnational Cinema Rayna Denison	181
The Sustained Popularity of In the Mood for Love: Cultural Consumption in Britain's Reception Context Fraser Elliott	201
Index	221