

Contents

Foreword	viii
Acknowledgements	xiv
1 An introduction to extreme sports	1
Phases of extreme sport activity	5
How might we understand extreme sports?	8
Summary	11
2 Principles of phenomenology	13
Phenomenology as philosophy	14
Traditional phenomenology	15
Phenomenology and human experience	19
Summary	26
3 Translating principles into practice	30
Transcendental phenomenology	31
Existential phenomenology	33
Hermeneutic phenomenology	35
Transpersonal phenomenology	40
Summary	41
4 Phenomenology and the extreme sport experience: an hermeneutic phenomenological methodology	44
Selecting a research topic	44
Preparation	45
Focusing on the question	46
Gathering data	49
Exploring the phenomenon	53
Writing	56
Holding the focus	57

Writing up the research 57

Summary 58

- 5 The risk hypothesis 60
- Extreme sports and risk-taking* 61
 - Edgeworks and extreme sports* 61
 - The type 'T' explanations* 62
 - The sensation-seeking perspective* 62
 - A participant perspective* 66
 - Summary* 70
- 6 The death-wish hypothesis 74
- The death wish: an introduction* 75
 - The death instinct* 77
 - Death anxiety* 78
 - Death and the symbolic relationship* 79
 - So what have we learnt so far?* 81
 - Reflections on death* 82
 - Summary* 87
- 7 The 'no fear' hypothesis 90
- Fear: an overview* 91
 - Psychoanalysis* 94
 - Stress-seeking* 95
 - Anxiety* 97
 - So what have we learnt so far?* 99
 - Reflections on fear and life* 100
 - Summary* 103
- 8 Experience of transformation 105
- Epitomising the ideal Western male* 106
 - Neotribes and transformation* 108
 - Opposing perspective* 109
 - Self-constructs* 109
 - Transformation as experience* 112
 - A changed view on life and living* 114
 - A phenomenological perspective* 117
 - Summary* 118

9	Becoming who you are	121
	Self as constructed renewal	122
	Rite of passage and sense of self	123
	Living in relationship to nature	123
	Living authentically	128
	Extreme sport as living the dream	129
	Listening to one's body	130
	On being alone	130
	Phenomenological perspectives on selfhood	131
	Summary	133
10	Experience of freedom	136
	Freedom as a socio-cultural reframe	136
	Experience as freedom from gender norms	137
	Freedom from the need to be in control	141
	Experience of freedom as mental quietness	143
	Freedom as the release of fear	144
	Phenomenology and freedom	146
	Summary	148
11	Evoking the ineffable	150
	Inadequacy of words	151
	Experience in time	154
	Intimacy and nature	155
	A primal thing	155
	Altered states	156
	Floating and flying	157
	Extreme sports and the transpersonal	159
	Summary	161
12	Returning to the lifeworld of the extreme sport experience	164
	Lived space	166
	Lived time	167
	Lived other	168
	Lived body	169
	Index	173