

Culture and Consensus in European Varieties of Capitalism

A “Common Sense” Analysis

Ian Bruff

Research Officer

Edge Hill University, UK

palgrave
macmillan

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
List of Abbreviations or Acronyms and Table	xi
1 Introduction	1
The varieties of capitalism literature and culture	3
Conceptualizing culture in capitalist society	7
Methodological issues	11
Gramsci removed from his context?	14
Outline of the book	18
2 Culture in the Literatures	21
The varieties of capitalism literature	22
Varieties of capitalism, varieties of neo-pluralism	28
Political culture	33
Webs of meaning in the local context	35
Cultural embeddedness and cultural constitution	38
Culture industries in and the culturalization of “late capitalism”	40
Power	42
Conclusion	45
3 An Alternative Framework: Gramsci’s “Common Sense”	47
Common sense and its production	50
Organic intellectuals and ideology	53
Societal and political hegemony	57
The state and common sense	61
The national and the international	65
Conclusion	70
4 The Netherlands and Germany from the Varieties of Capitalism Perspective	72
The Netherlands	74
Germany	81
Conclusion: towards a “common sense” analysis	89

5	The Netherlands and Wassenaar	91
	Consensus in the Netherlands	93
	The assumption of vulnerability	98
	Crisis and Wassenaar	102
	The post-Wassenaar trajectory	108
	Conclusion	113
6	Germany and the Alliance for Jobs	115
	Consensus in Germany	116
	German capital and the social market economy	120
	The Alliance for Jobs and economic “reality”	126
	The Alliance for Jobs and labour market flexibility	131
	Conclusion	135
7	Post-2001 Radicalization	137
	The Netherlands: the end of consensus?	140
	Germany: consensus on substantial reform?	148
	Conclusion	157
8	Conclusion: “Critical” IPE?	158
	Notes	164
	Bibliography	171
	Index	188