1 Introduction and Overview 1

I Individual Education Decisions 7

2 Life Expectancy and Development 9
2.1 Introduction 10
2.2 The Model 14
2.2.1 Production of Human Capital 15
2.2.2 Aggregate Production 18
2.2.3 Intragenerational Equilibrium 20
2.2.4 Properties of the Intragenerational Equilibrium . . . 24
2.3 The Process of Economic Development 25
2.3.1 Links Between Generations 25
2.3.2 Dynamics of Development 28
2.4 Some Applications and Extensions 36
2.4.1 A Simple Simulation of Development 36
2.4.2 Empirical Relevance 38
2.4.3 Extensions 39
2.5 Concluding Remarks 40

3 Education and Earnings Inequality 45
3.1 Introduction 45
3.2 A Model of Human Capital Formation 50

3.2.1 Individuals 50
3.2.2 Human Capital Formation 52
3.2.3 Firms and Labor Demand 55
3.2.4 Labor Market Equilibrium 56
3.3 Changes in Earnings Inequality 57
3.3.1 Forces Driving Changes in Inequality 57
3.3.2 Changes in Inequality 58
3.4 The Impact of Education 60
3.4.1 Heterogenous Schooling Provision 61
3.4.2 Education Technology 62
3.4.3 Discussion 64
3.5 Tentative Evidence and Possible Extensions 66
3.5.1 Some Evidence 66
3.5.2 Related Results and Extensions to the Model 71
3.6 Concluding Remarks 74

II Individual Search Decisions 75

4 Disaggregate Matching 77
4.1 Introduction 78
4.2 Empirical Matching Functions 79
4.3 Data and Econometric Issues 83
4.3.1 Data and Disaggregation Features 83
4.3.2 Conceptual and Econometric Issues 86
4.4 Aggregate Matching 88
4.4.1 General Results 88
4.4.2 Matching Functions by Sources of Flows 92
4.5 Matching by Occupational Groups 95
4.5.1 Empirical Matching on the Level of Occupations . . 97
4.5.2 Disaggregation by Age and Education 101
4.6 Concluding Remarks 102

5 Strategic Hiring and Search 105
5.1 Introduction 106
5.2 Matching and Job Competition 107
5.3 Endogenous Hiring Behavior 109
5.4 Empirical Findings 112
5.4.1 Data 112
5.4.2 Results 113

5.5 Concluding Remarks 116

6 Unobserved Bilateral Search 117
6.1 Introduction 118
6.2 A Simple Model of Endogenous Search 120
6.2.1 The Labor Market 120
6.2.2 On-the-job Search 123
6.2.3 Search Behavior of Firms 126
6.2.4 Steady State Equilibrium 127
6.3 Empirical Consequences of Unobserved Search 133
6.3.1 A Common Problem 133
6.3.2 Testable Implications of the Model 136
6.4 A Correction for the Bias 137
6.4.1 True Matching Elasticities 137
6.4.2 Empirical Relevance 139
6.5 Concluding Remarks 145

7 Regional Mobility and Job Competition 147
7.1 Introduction 148
7.2 Data issues 150
7.3 Spatial Dependencies in the Labor Market 150
7.3.1 Global and Local Spatial Autocorrelation 151
7.3.2 Spatial Misspecification 153
7.4 Spatial Structure of Job Creation 156
7.4.1 Spatially Augmented Matching Functions 156
7.4.2 The Effect of German Re-unification 161
7.5 Towards a Spatial Matching Framework 163
7.5.1 A Simple Model of Endogenous Search 163
7.5.2 Empirical Application 167
7.6 Concluding Remarks 169

8 Summary and Conclusion 171

A Proofs for Claims in Chapter 2 177

B A Generalized Version of Chapter 3 185
B.1 Decreasing Returns to Human Capital 185
B.2 The Total Supply of Human Capital 188
B.3 Firms 191
B.4 Equilibrium prices 191
B.5 Proof of Proposition 12 193

C Econometric Issues for Chapter 4 197
C.1 Data Appendix 197
C.2 A Bootstrap Test for Stationarity of Panels 201
C.3 Stochastic Matching Frontiers 206

D Data Description for Chapter 5 211

E Econometric Issues for Chapter 6 213
E.1 Estimation Bias 213
E.2 Error Variance 215

F Issues Related to Chapter 7 219
F.1 Alternative measures of spatial autocorrelation 219
F.2 West German Labor Market Regions 220
