

Contents

I. Theoretical Analysis	1
1. Introduction.....	1
2. Methodology	20
3. Theory	33
3.1. Race.....	33
3.2. Ethnicity.....	46
4. Self and Alter	55
4.1. Colonialisms.....	55
4.2. Postcolonialisms.....	91
4.2.1. Orientalism	96
4.2.2. Colonial Females.....	100
4.2.3. Hybridity, Colonial Mimicry	104
II. Textual Analysis.....	111
1. Conversion and Contamination. The Metamorphosis of a ‘Spice Girl’ – John Fletcher’s The Island Princess	111
1.1. Of Spice and (Wo)Men: Miscegenation and Segregation, Affirmation and Subversion	111
1.1.1. Permanent Ambivalences	118
1.1.2. Immanent Ambivalences	120
Beauty and Skin Colour.....	120
Nature and Character, Norms and Values.....	125
1.1.3. Meta-Textual Ambivalences.....	127
1.1.4. Genre.....	136
1.2. Colonial Couples.....	143
1.2.1. Other and Other.....	144
1.2.2. Self and Other.....	151
The Princess and the Portuguese.....	152
The Princess and the Portuguese?.....	158
1.2.3. Self and Self	161

1.3. Confusing Conversions	165
Connected with the Intertexts The Renegado by Philip Massinger and A Christian Turned Turk by Robert Daborne	165
Christian Clashes	181
1.3.1. Intertext I – The Renegado	188
1.3.2. Intertext II – A Christian Turned Turk	198
2. Loving or Leaving the (New) ‘Turks’? William Percy’s Mahomet and His Heaven	211
2.1. “The Better Savage” – Making Mahomet	211
2.1.1. Genre	212
2.1.2. Mohammed and Other Savages	216
2.2. “From East to West, from West to East”	244
2.2.1. Turkishness and Englishness	244
2.2.2. Islam, Protestantism, Catholicism	253
3. Staging the Stranger. Ben Jonson’s The Masque of Blackness	259
3.1. ‘Black is Beautiful’ – The Literary Inversion of an Ideal?	259
3.1.1. (Ab)using ‘The Blackamoors’	259
3.1.2. Genre	261
3.1.3. Implications and Evaluations of ‘Blackness’	265
3.1.4. Masking ‘Blackness’	281
3.2. Allegorizing Albion.....	292
3.2.1. “To Blanche an Ethiop and Revive a Corpse” – A Masque for King James I.....	292
3.2.2. “Conquer in Great Beauty’s War” – A Masque for Queen Anne	296
4. Conclusion	309
III. Bibliography	313
1. Primary Literature	313
2. Secondary Literature	316
IV. Index	334