

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction	i
I The Broken Promise: Ideology and the Ageing of the New	12
Georg Lukács and the Reification of Consciousness	13
Lukács and the Novel	18
Realism, Modernism, Totality and Faulkner's The Sound and the Fury	20
Caddy and Faulkner's promesse du bonheur in The Sound and the Fury	27
Adorno and the Culture Industry	31
John Dos Passos' USA	36
Thomas Mann's Doctor Faustus	42
Postmodernism and the Avant-Garde	47
Jameson's Postmodernism	52
II Postmodern Reflections: Thinking after Marxism	62
Jean-François Lyotard and the Problem with Grand Narratives	65
Lyotard, Postmodernism and the Sublime	68
Unimaginable Guilt: Toni Morrison's Beloved	69
Jean Baudrillard: Ideology and Simulacra	79
'Now More Than Ever': Death and Cultural Consumption in Don DeLillo	81
A Portrait of the Postmodern: Goods and Simulacra	83
Postmodern Forms: Pastiche and Electronic Reproduction	91
Don DeLillo and Self-Conscious Postmodernism	99
DeLillo: From Modernism to Postmodernism	112
III Postmodernity and the Historical Novel	123
With the Grain: Reading Thomas Pynchon's Mason &amp; Dixon	128
Adorno: The Ageing of the New	136
Martin Amis's Time's Arrow : The Art of Justification	139

IV Postmodern Political Fictions	152
The Fetish of the New: Culture and Class in Alasdair Gray's Something Leather	152
Salman Rushdie	163
Aijaz Ahmad on Rushdie and the Postmodern	164
Rushdie and Orientalism	170
' No Place Like Home ': Postmodern Politics and The Satanic Verses	173
The Satanic Verses and The New	180
Imagining Utopia: The Land of Oz	188
V Postmodern Inadequacies: Adorno contra Jameson	198
Bibliography	208
Index	216