

Table of Contents

Preface	xi
Introduction	1
I Colonization and Canonization	11
Colonial and Canonical Marginalization and Oppression on the Basis of Race	11
Colonial and Canonical Marginalization and Oppression on the Basis of Gender	16
Colonial and Canonical Marginalization and Oppression on the Basis of Class	22
Colonial Education and Oppositional Perspectives	25
II Colonial and Canonical Control over Post-colonial Writers	37
Socio-Economic and Political Complications	39
Confrontation with History	50
Colonial Criticism	52
Language Controversy	56
III Products of Colonialism: Mimicry and Madness	71
Disorder and Mimicry through Colonial Apparatuses in V. S. Naipaul's The Mimic Men	71
Colonial Alienation Producing Madness in Jean Rhys' Wide Sargasso Sea	91
IV Racism and Cultural Imperialism	121
Racism Reduces Conrad's Attack on Colonialism in Heart of Darkness	123
A Marriage between Western Autobiography and a Lakota Autobiography: Cultural Struggle in Content and Form in Black Elk Speaks	138
V Decolonization and Counter-Canonization	155
Resistance, Restriction, and Restoration in Richard Wright's Native Son	156

Table of Contents

Alice Walker's Decolonization of Traditional Love in The Color Purple	167
Compromise?	178
Conclusion	189
Works Cited	197
Index	221