

Contents

Series Editor's Preface	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction: Visible and Invisible Bodies Ruth Heholt and Joanne Ella Parsons	1
Part I. Constructed Bodies
1. Violent Play and Regular Discipline: The Abuses of the Schoolboy Body in Victorian Fiction Alice Crossley	25
2. Punishing the Unregulated Manly Body and Emotions in Early Victorian England Joanne Begiato	46
3. The New Man's Body in M ^{énie} Muriel Dowie's Gallia Tara MacDonald	65
Part II. Fractured and Fragmented Bodies
4. Pirates and Prosthetics: Manly Messages for Managing Limb Loss in Victorian and Edwardian Adventure Narratives Ryan Sweet	87
5. Tuberculosis and Visionary Sensibility: The Consumptive Body as Masculine Dissent in George Eliot and Henry James Meredith Miller	108
6. Monstrous Masculinities from the Macaroni to Mr Hyde: Reading the Gothic 'Gentleman' Alison Younger	128
7. Visible yet Immaterial: The Phantom and the Male Body in Ghost Stories by Three Victorian Women Writers Ruth Heholt	148

Part III. Unruly Bodies

8. Aesthetics of Deviance: George du Maurier's Representations of the Artist's Body for Punch as Discourse on Manliness, 1870–1880 Françoise Baillet	171
9. Suffering, Asceticism and the Starving Male Body in Mary Barton Charlotte Boyce	193
10. Fosco's Fat: Transgressive Consumption and Bodily Control in Wilkie Collins' The Woman in White Joanne Ella Parsons	215
11. Sensationalising Otherness: The Italian Male Body in Mary Elizabeth Braddon's 'Olivia' and 'Garibaldi' Anne-Marie Beller	234
Contributors	251
Index	255