

Contents

List of Figures	xiv
List of Contributors	xvi
Acknowledgements	xx
Series Editors' Foreword	xxi
Introduction	1
Katherine Byrne, James Leggott and Julie Anne Taddeo
Conflicted Men	4
Men at Work	5
Warfare	7
The Female Gaze	8
PART I The Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries
1 The Masculine Economies of Banished	15
James Ward
Introduction	15
Masculine Economies	17
Violence and Sacrifice	22
Banished , Masculinity and Australian History	24
Conclusion	28
2 'I will not fight for my country ... for my ship ... my King ... or Captain': Redefining Imperial Masculinities in To the Ends of the Earth	35
Mark Fryers
Introduction	35
Empire, Masculinity and the Sea	36
This Ship of Fools is England	41
The Sea as a Philosophical and Nightmarish Space	42

Conflicting Masculinities

Masculinity, Sexuality and the Sea	45
'I kill people without knowing it'	47
Conclusion	49
3 Television Costume Drama and the Eroticised, Regionalised Body: Poldark and Outlander	52
Gemma Goodman and Rachel Moseley
Introduction	52
Masculinities and Male Bodies	54
Regional Identity and the Body	56
Colonised Territory: Looking at the Naked Male Body	62
Outlander : Body as Contested Territory	64
Conclusion	67
4 Power and Passion: Seventeenth-Century Masculinities Dramatised on the BBC in the Twenty-First Century	71
Sarah Betts
Seventeenth-Century Drama on the BBC	73
Coming of Age	75
Passion	79
Interior and Exterior Masculinities	82
Conclusion	85
PART II Visions of the Nineteenth Century
5 A Post-Feminist Hero: Sandy Welch's North and South	91
Sarah E. Fanning
'The Darcy Model': Andrew Davies's Pride and Prejudice	92
The Evolution of Post-Feminist Masculinities in the Televised Classic Novel	93
Moving Beyond Darcymania: A Hero in His Own Right	96
North and South (2004): Thornton's Re-inscription as a Post-Feminist Victorian Hero	98
Men as Men: Male Community	100

Contents

Wounded Masculinity: Male Emotion	101
Homosocial Bonding: John Thornton and Nicholas Higgins	104
Post-Feminism and the Father Figure	106
Conclusion	107
6 'Because my daddy would protect them': Ripper Street's Edmund Reid and the Competing Demands of Home and Public Lives	111
Jessica Saxon
Losing His Home: Series One and Two	114
Regaining His Home: Series Three	115
Reid and Neo-Victorian Representations of Masculinity	117
Daddy/Detective	121
Conclusion	124
7 'Pleasure and pain, again and again' – Between Monstrosity and Inner Turmoil: The Representation of Masculinity in Penny Dreadful	127
Caroline Langhorst
Introduction: 'Not a girl's heart. A man's heart'	127
'When you transform a life, you're making it anew': Penny Dreadful and Victorian Gothic	129
'For the monster is not in my face, but in my soul': The Portrayal of Conflicted Gothic Masculinity in Penny Dreadful	132
'You're a very young man. I've long since learnt that the truth is mutable': Troubled Father and Son Relationships	139
Conclusion	141
8 Pathological Masculinities: Syphilis and the Medical Profession in The Frankenstein Chronicles	146
Katherine Byrne
Monstrous Doctors and the Legacy of Mary Shelley's Frankenstein	147

Conflicting Masculinities

An Unlikely 'Hero': Marlott and Syphilis	150
Power and Education	153
Changing Masculinities: Sharpe for the New Millennium?	154
Conclusion	158
 PART III Masculinities from World War I to the Cold War
 9 'The war is done. Shut the door on it!': The Great War, Masculinity and Trauma in British Period Television
Julie Anne Taddeo	165
Uniforms and Masculine Authority	167
Hysterical Men	171
The Manly Death, Shirkers and Disabled Bodies	174
The Veteran's Anger	177
Conclusion: Memorialising Male Sacrifice	181
 10 Pride versus Prejudice: Wounded Men, Masculinity and Disability in Downton Abbey
Claire O'Callaghan	187
The Dilemma of Disabled Masculinity	191
'Think of me as dead': Matthew Crawley's Disabled Masculinity	193
Disabled Masculinity: The Case of Mr Bates	196
Conclusion	201
 11 A Minority of Men: The Conscientious Objector in Period Drama
Lucy Brown	206
'His name is Coward. His name is Shirker': Realism and Melodrama in The Village	208
'Mixed with sour milk': Downton Abbey's Idealistic CO	213

Contents

‘You’re not the man I thought you were’: Echoes of World War I in Home Fires and Upstairs, Downstairs	216
Conclusion	218
12 Cads, Cowards and Cowmen: Masculinity in Crisis in World War II Television Drama	221
Stella Hockenfull
Masculinity in British Cinema and Television Drama	222
Wounded Masculinity in Period Drama	229
The WI Saves the Day	233
Conclusion	234
13 ‘Have you seen Walliams’ Bottom?’: Detecting the ‘Ordinary’ Man in Partners in Crime	239
Louise FitzGerald
Gender and Genre	240
Camp David, Camp Criticism and Otherness	241
The Two Tommys: The Secret Adversary and Models of Male Identity	245
Of Bees and Men: Gender Dualism and the Detective Figure	249
Conclusion	254
14 ‘No Need to Matronise Me!’: The Crown, the Male Consort and Conflicted Masculinity	259
James Leggott
The Feminised Monarchy and Melodrama	261
The Male Consort: Malcontent and Moderniser	264
The Crown and the Philip Problem	269
The Crown and the Twenty-First Century	271
Bibliography	278
Index	296