

Table of contents

Acknowledgements	XIII
Introduction	1
0.1 Identity construction in/through translation	1
0.2 Approach and methodology	6
0.3 Overview of the chapters	12
CHAPTER 1
Assessing irony, characterization and religion in the Italian translation of Jeanette Winterson's Oranges Are Not the Only Fruit	19
1.1 Introduction: The success of Oranges and the study of Le arance	19
1.2 Humorous and ironic depictions of the mother figure	22
1.3 The Italian rendition of the mother's religious vocation	31
1.4 Collocative clashes and the allotropic nature of the mother	43
1.5 The body, gender roles and transvestism in the Italian and English texts	52
1.6 Conclusion	59
CHAPTER 2
Recodification of class and gender in the French translation of Jeanette Winterson's Oranges Are Not the Only Fruit	61
2.1 Introduction: Adoption and class in Oranges	61
2.2 The mother's social class and status: Limited possibilities, hoarding, envy and rituals	65
2.3 The mother's position in relation to the working class: Repulsion and disassociation from corruption and pathology	72
2.4 The regulation of motherhood, power and ethics	78
2.5 The maternal precepts: Class mobility and female emancipation	84
2.6 The daughter's principles and attitude to issues of class	93
2.7 Conclusion	98

CHAPTER 3

The passion for the real: Empowering maternal precepts in the Italian translations of A. S. Byatt's short stories 101

- 3.1 Introduction: Gendered reality and problematization of truth in Diotima 101
- 3.2 "Sugar" and the untruthful mother 104
- 3.3 "Stories", "tales", "accounts" and "narrative" versus "racconto" and "resoconto" 106
- 3.4 Fabricated lies and truths 109
- 3.5 The mother's realism 110
- 3.6 The art of knitting 114
- 3.7 Byatt's self-conscious realism 117
- 3.8 Sensory adjectives: "Pink" and "white" 119
- 3.9 Sensory adjectives: "Soft" versus "morbido" and "soffice" 125
- 3.10 Princesses and goddesses: Their gendered symbolism in Italian 138
- 3.11 Conclusion 143

CHAPTER 4

Dialogic spaces and intertextual resonances in the French translation of A. S. Byatt's autobiographical story "Sugar" 145

- 4.1 Introduction: Autobiography/autofiction querelle revisited 145
- 4.2 The mirror stage as deictic space of interrelational explorations 150
- 4.3 The iconicity of the house as the transitional mother-daughter space 158
- 4.4 Open spaces and the semiotic chora in the mother's tales 167
- 4.5 Conclusion 180

CHAPTER 5

Jamaica Kincaid's Autobiografia di mia madre: Voices from the abyss 183

- 5.1 Introduction: Gloom and doom in Kincaid's Autobiography 183
- 5.2 Definitions of the negative and its significance in Kincaid and Diotima 187
- 5.3 The political significance of chiasmus and litotes in Autobiografia 191
- 5.4 Mise-en-abyme and patterns of redundancy in source text and target text 196
- 5.5 Muraro's complesso and Autobiografia 204
- 5.6 The magical powers of the abyss 209
- 5.7 Conclusion 219

CHAPTER 6

Orality, performativity and the body in Jamaica Kincaid's
Autobiographie de ma mère	221
6.1 Introduction: Orality in African-Caribbean storytelling	221
6.2 The narrative and theatrical performance in English and French	223
6.3 A Butlerian approach to the narrator's performance in English and French	239
6.4 Writing the mother's face	249
6.5 Conclusion	256
Conclusion	259
References	269
Name index	285
Subject index	289