

Contents

Acknowledgments		ix
Chapter 1	Analogies, Theories, and the Concept of Genre	1
	The Four Analogies
	Analogies, Theories, and the Scientific Paradigm
	Genre: A Working Definition
	Examples: Scope and Language
Chapter 2	Literary Genres as Biological Species	19
	Life, Death, and Evolutionary Concepts
	One Exception, Two Problems, Three Stages
	Darwinism: Alive and Kicking
	Dominance and the Periphery: The Indirect Path of Evolution
Chapter 3	Literary Genres as Families	53
	The Family Analogy: The Logical Aspect
	The Family Analogy: Parent-Child Relationships and Beyond
	Growing Up In and Through the Novel
	A Final Familial Thought
Chapter 4	Literary Genres as Social Institutions	85
	Conventions in the Theater: The Semiotic Connection
	Life Is But a Stage, the Stage Is But Life
	The Role of the Blocking Figure: The Alazon
	Some Variations on the Role of the Blocking Figure

Chapter 5	Literary Genres as Speech Acts	119
	Literary Genres as Speech Acts
	Literary Genres as Imitations of Speech Acts
	Carpe Diem or Vivamus atque Amemus
	The Amemus , Speech Acts, and Literary Genres
Chapter 6	Concluding Remarks	155
Bibliography		161
Index		171