

Contents

I. Introduction	1
II. Structures and definitions of the actual demand for social research in the Federal Republic of Germany	8
a) Quantitative growth	9
b) The representation of social scientists in science policy	13
c) The demand structure	14
d) Special transfer institutions	17
III. Problems of the supply from the social sciences - "Institutional" factors of receptivity and resistance	20
a) The research capacities
b) The orientations of social scientists	24
IV. Problems of supply from the social sciences - factors of cognitive receptivity and resistance	29
a) Description	31
b) Explanation, prediction, evaluation	32
c) Social technology	36
d) Systems formation and systems planning	41
V. Utilization of Social Sciences in the Federal Republic of Germany	47
A) The Role of the Social Sciences in Social Politics - the situation of the social indicators movement
2) Political Problems posed to the Social Sciences in the Area of Social Policy and their Degree of Complexity	50
3) The Response of the Social Sciences to Political Demands in the Area of Social Policy	56

B. The Social Sciences and Public Health - Social Medicine
1) Influences of the Social Sciences on Problem Formation	61
2) Political Problems Posed to the Social Sciences in the Area of Public Health and their Degrees of Complexity	64
3) Governmental Measures to Institutionalize Social Medicine	66
4) Response of the Social Sciences to Demands in the Area of Social Medicine
a) the initiation of research - factors of cognitive resistance	69
b) institutional factors of resistance	72
C. The Utilization of Political Science -	76
the case of governmental and administrative science (Regierungs- und Verwaltungslehre, Planungswissenschaften)
1) The emerging convergence of political pro- blems and research in political science	76
2) The Failure of Planning and the Polarization in Political Science	80
a) The political process
b) Trends in political science research since 1967	82
3) Some Notes on the Professionalization of Political Science and the Institutional- ization of Public Administration	91
4) Conclusions	94
D. The Social Sciences and the Development of Educational Research	95
1) Developments in the social sciences leading to political formation in the area of edu- cation	96
2) Political Problem formulation in the area of education and the institutionalization of scientific expertise	99

3. The support, directing and institutionalization of educational research	109
4. Cognitive and institutional structures in educational research	113
VI. Conclusion	119
VII. References	124