

Contents

|   |      |
|---|------|
| Preface  | xiii |
| 1 Introduction                          | 1    |
| Introduction  | 1    |
| The political evaluation of Durkheim                  | 2    |
| Durkheim and science                                  | 3    |
| Rereading theory                                      | 4    |
| Conclusion: The radical Durkheim                      | 8    |
| 2 Durkheim's epistemology and sociology | 13   |
| Durkheim and epistemology                             | 13   |
| Durkheim's sociological concepts                      | 19   |
| Crime and punishment                                  | 22   |
| Durkheim, angelicism and vitalism                     | 24   |
| Durkheim and post-structuralism                       | 26   |
| Durkheim and the concept of charisma                  | 29   |
| Politics and charisma                                 | 33   |
| Conclusion  | 38   |
| 3 Durkheim and politics                 | 42   |
| Introduction  | 42   |
| Durkheim's social evolutionism                        | 43   |
| Durkheim, authoritarian liberalism and conservatism   | 47   |
| Durkheim and socialism                                | 49   |
| Durkheim and technocratic socialism                   | 50   |
| Durkheim, Marxism and communists                      | 51   |
| Durkheim's radical socialist vision                   | 55   |
| Conclusion  | 57   |
| 4 Durkheim and the division of labour   | 60   |
| Introduction  | 60   |
| Solidarity and social order                           | 60   |
|   | ix   |

|  |         |
|--|---------|
| The genesis of the division of labour                            | 62      |
| The genesis of primitive social orders                           | 66      |
| Societal rivalry and the division of labour                      | 69      |
| Colonialism, class and conflict                                  | 71      |
| Durkheim and the pathological forms of the divisionof labour | 75      |
| Conclusion   | 83      |
| 5 Durkheim and the juridical relation                 | 88  |
| Introduction   | 88      |
| Durkheim's systematic theory of law                              | 88      |
| Durkheim and contemporary anthropology                           | 89      |
| Repressive law and class societies                               | 93      |
| The soul, the personality and the responsible subject            | 99      |
| Social life and social obligations                               | 101     |
| Durkheim, sovereignty and the law                                | 103     |
| Critiques of Durkheim's theorization of law                      | 105     |
| Sovereignty and the command theory of law                        | 109     |
| Rational-legal orders  | 112     |
| Conclusion   | 114     |
| 6 Fatalism  | 118 |
| Introduction   | 118     |
| Suicide and the critics                                   | 118     |
| Fatalism: A suppressed, displaced and condensed concept          | 120     |
| Fatalism and slavery   | 123     |
| 'The forced division of labour' and 'forced solidarity'          | 126     |
| Conclusion   | 129     |
| 7 A reformulation of Durkheim's Suicide               | 134 |
| Introduction   | 134     |
| Fatalism and anomie  | 135     |
| Causes and occasions   | 142     |
| Egoism and altruism  | 146     |
| A Durkheimian perspective on the 'large group'                   | 151     |
| Rationalities, personalities and social orders                   | 152     |
| Conclusion   | 155     |
| 8 Durkheim and Marx: A dialogue                       | 159 |
| Introduction   | 159     |
| Organic solidarity   | 159     |

|  |     |
|--|-----|
| Marxism: A Durkheimian critique                        | 161 |
| Socialism  | 168 |
| Conclusion   | 176 |
| 9 The state, law and order in complex societies | 179 |
| Introduction   | 179 |
| The state and law in socialist societies               | 183 |
| The rule of law and socialism                          | 187 |
| Capitalism, socialism and the criminal law             | 189 |
| A Critique of judicial ideology                        | 193 |
| Crime in socialist societies                           | 195 |
| Crime: Some modest socialist proposals                 | 198 |
| 10 Conclusion                                   | 205 |
| Bibliography                                    | 207 |
| Index   | 227 |