CONTENTS

Preface vii

Introduction 1

1 The rhetoric of success and the reality of underachievement in British religious education 10

2 Traditional and modern diversity 25

3 Late modern diversity 38

4 The demise of confessional religious education 53

5 Ninian Smart, Working Paper 36 and the origins of phenomenological religious education 65

6 The phenomenology of religion 79

7 The phenomenological approach to religious education 94

8 Religion, phenomenology and religious understanding 113

9 John Hull, the Enlightenment Project and the liberal model of religious education 126

10 The liberal model of religious education: a final critique 145

11 Postmodern thought 159

12 Postmodern religious education 180

13 Interpretive religious education, representing religions and challenging prejudice 198

14 Religious education and moral education 218

15 A post-liberal model of religious education 232

References 245
Index 260