

Contents

List of figures	page vii
Notes on contributors	viii
Acknowledgements	xi
1 Introduction: the Cold War as an imaginary war Matthew Grant and Benjamin Ziemann	1
2 The apocalyptic fiction: shaping the future in the Cold War Eva Horn	30
3 Building peace, fearing the apocalypse? Nuclear danger in Soviet Cold War culture Miriam Dobson	51
4 Sixty years and counting: nuclear themes in American culture, 1945 to the present Paul Boyer	75
5 The imaginative landscape of nuclear war in Britain, 1945–65 Matthew Grant	92
6 German angst? Debating Cold War anxieties in West Germany, 1945–90 Benjamin Ziemann	116
7 After Hiroshima: Günther Anders and the history of anti-nuclear critique Jason Dawsey	140

8	Hiroshima/Nagasaki, civil rights and anti-war protest in Japan's Cold War Ann Sherif	165
9	Catholic anti-communism, the bomb and perceptions of apocalypse in West Germany and the USA, 1945–90 Daniel Gerster	189
10	'The nuclear arms race is psychological at its roots': physicians and their therapies for the Cold War Claudia Kemper	213
11	Imagining the apocalypse: nuclear winter in science and the world Paul Rubinson	238
12	Images of nuclear war in US government films from the early Cold War Lars Nowak	260
	Index	287