

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
PART I
Architectonics	11
1 'The Bond of All Things': Neoplatonic Ideas of Eros and Music in the Early Modern Episteme	13
Theories of Union: Discourses of Eros and Music	13
Classical and Christian Theories of Eros and Music	16
Speculative Music and the Neoplatonic
Eros as Binding Agents	21
Musical Harmony in the Microcosm and
in the Political Body	22
Unity as Poetic Principle	23
2 Empowering Eros: Embodied Harmonies and Erotic Mediation	31
Eros and Music as Mediating Agents	31
Sensual Love and Practical Music as
Educational Agents	35
Practical Music as Love's Preferred Agent	38
The Ambiguity of Music's Erotic Action	42
The Dual Action of Music and the Erotic Ear	45
3 'Love's Proper Exercise': Eros and the Dance	54
Erotic Action and Temperate Dancing	55
The Degradation of the Cosmic Dance: "Sellenger's
Round, or The Beginning of the World"	60

	The Erotic Dancing Body	68
	The Ambivalent Rhetorical Status of the Dancing Body	70
4	The Ambivalent Lute	79
	The Orphic Lute	79
	The Political Lute	87
	The Erotic Lute	90
	The Fair Lutenist	97
PART II
Poetics		119
5	Ideas of Eros in the Early Modern Lute Ayre and Madrigal	121
	The Ethos of the Musical Genres and the Two Eros	121
	Ideas of Eros in Madrigal and Lute Song Lyrics	124
	'Infinite Volumes': Miscellanies of Love in Elizabethan Madrigal and Lute Ayre Lyrics	128
	Neoplatonic Ideas of Love in the Lyrics	131
	The Voice as Erotic Instrument	136
	Rhetoric and Eroticism	141
6	Erotic and Rhetorical Trivializations of Music in the English Epyllion	161
	Music and Eros in the English Epyllion	161
	Natural Music and the Harmonic World	165
	Erotic Trivializations of Music in the Epyllion	172
	'Love is Forme': Fiction and Friction	179
7	Desire as Palimpsest, or the Myth of Philomel in The Rape of Lucrece and Titus Andronicus	193
	Philomel as Musical Myth	193
	Expressing the Unspeakable: Lavinia as Philomel	198
	Philomel, an 'Innocent Siren'?	205
	Philomel as Failed Orpheus: Dismembering the Political Body	209

8	Specularity or Speculation? Echo and Eros in Venus and Adonis	215
	Echo/echo and the Music of the Spheres	216
	Transformative Encounters: Echo and the Twofold Nature of Eros	219
	Echo and Eros in Venus and Adonis	222
	The Speculating Echo	228
	Conclusion	238
	Bibliography	243
	Index	261