Contents

| Acknowledgments                  |                             | xii      |
|----------------------------------|-----------------------------|----------|
| Introduction                     |                             | 3        |
| Chapter 1: BOUCHER'S TACT        |                             | 8        |
| •                                | Materiality and Personality |          |
|                                  | Touch and Tact              | 9        |
|                                  | The Commercial Imagination  | 13       |
|                                  | Personal Mythologies        | 22       |
|                                  | The Promiscuous Self        | 33       |
|                                  | The Artist as Consumer      | 4773 |
|                                  | Pompadour's Painter         | 80       |
| Chapte                           | r 2: CHARDIN'S CRAFT        | 86       |
| _                                | Deep Materiality            | 87       |
|                                  | The Object (Inside/Out)     | 95       |
|                                  | The Blind Touch             | 111      |
| 1                                | Underneath the Visible      | 123      |
| •                                | The Subject                 | 139      |
| ,                                | The Return to the Object    | 155      |
| ,                                | The Painter                 | 165      |
| Chapter 3: FRAGONARD'S SEDUCTION |                             | 176      |
| -                                | Eros and Individuality      | 177      |
| -                                | The Unseen                  | 186      |
| ]                                | Being and Becoming          | 191      |
| ]                                | Pictorial Seduction         | 199      |
| 7                                | The Erotic Mother           | 203      |
| 7                                | The Artist's Pleasure       | 208      |
| 7                                | The Painter's Touch         | 212      |
| I                                | Love and Life               | 223      |
|                                  | Ars Erotica                 | 236      |
| Notes                            |                             | 238      |
| Bibliography                     |                             | 271      |
| INDEX                            |                             | 287      |
| IMAGE CREDITS                    |                             | 297      |